Foreign Affairs Schools to Open Thursday, Jan. 3

Thursday, January 3, the first sessions of the 1929 Schools of Foreign Affairs will open with a discussion of "Our Relations with Latin America." Prof. Charles S. Braden will lead the round table discussion in the afternoon. He is assistant professor in the department of the History and Literature of Religions at Northwestern university conducting a course in South American religions. As a missionary he spent ten years in South America, (three years in Bolivia and seven in Chili). He was president of the Theological Seminary in Santiago. He lectured in various sections of the United States on "Christianity and International Relations."

Prof. Braden will direct the thought of the afternoon school along the lines of the following question-outline:

"What changes in the attitudes of Latin American peoples may be expected from the visit of President-Elect Hoover?" What is the Coolidge Doctrine? To what extent shall the United States allow the Monroe Doctrine to affect her participation in other far-reaching internationally agreements? Did the Havana Conference materially advance the cause of inter-American friendship and understanding? Is it desirable that responsibility for the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine be shared with the larger and more advanced Latin American republics? Do the results of America's policy in Nicaragua justify any further extension of the policy?"

This meeting is at 4:30 o'clock. Mrs. Augusta McDonald is to preside. At 6:15 a dinner will be served to those making reservations by Wednesday noon through Mrs. A. B. Culley, Univ. 4203. Invited guests and speakers for the dinner hour are: Mr. F. L. Roberts, district manager of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce for United States Department of Commerce, Chicago, and Mr. Carl G. Normelli.

In the evening at 8 o'clock Prof. Chester Lloyd Jones of the Department of Economics, University of Wisconsin, will deliver an address on "Political and Economic Outlook in the Caribbean."

Professor Jones has been a member of the educational commission of the Pan-American Association for International Conciliation, and has visited the universities of South America. In 1918 he was a director of the Bureau of Foreign Agents of the War Trade Board in Washington. He has been a commercial attache of the American embassy in Madrid, of the American Legation in Havana, and of the American Embassy in Paris. He is the author of a number of books on political science.

Mrs. James L. Lardner, president of the Evanston League of Women Voters' will preside at the evening session. This is the first day's program of the fifth series of Schools of Foreign Affairs sponsored by the Evanston Woman's club, the International Relations Department of the League of Women Voters, the W. C. T. U. and the Evanston Business and Professional Women's club, and, for one day, the Evanston Rotary club. A course ticket may be purchased at the Evanston Woman's club or the Congregational Church House. Single admissions may be paid at the door. A course ticket admits to each session or several admissions may be used at once. The dinner charge is extra. Mrs. Gero. H. Tomlinson is general chairman of the schools.
