North Shore Railroad Reflects Xmas Spirit

The spirit of Christmas is extensively reflected in decorations all along the Chicago, North Shore, and Milwaukee railroad (North Shore line) from Chicago to Milwaukee. Large illuminated trees have been installed in the stations at Milwaukee, Racine, Kenosha and Wilson avenue, Chicago, and a tree also has been placed on the roof of the Milwaukee terminal. Wreaths are hung in all stations along the line.

Diners and parlor cars have wreaths in the windows and festoons throughout the interiors, while the season's greetings are conveyed to the public by illuminated markers on the rear of all dining-car and parlor-car trains. Cards bearing a personal greeting to passengers from the North Shore Line management are being distributed by conductors on all trains. As an added Christmas service feature, prize beef from the 1928 International Live Stock exposition in Chicago is being served in diners during the holiday season.

One of the most striking Christmas decorations in the downtown Chicago business district is being displayed in the window of the main out-bound loop station of the North Shore line at 223 S. Wabash avenue. It consists of a wreath eight feet in diameter, in the center of which is an artificial candle five feet high. The candle is lighted by a cluster of 30 flame-colored electric bulbs, which alternately flicker off and on so that a realistic impression of a turning candle is given.

State Public Health Department to Have New Health Bulletin

The first edition of a new bi-weekly health bulletin, under the title of the Illinois Health Messenger, prepared for popular distribution and published by the State Department of Public Health, will appear next week, according to an announcement made here today by Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, state health director. The innovation, which will replace the monthly bulletin of the past, is another step initiated by the health authorities in an effort to keep the public adequately informed concerning health conditions, seasonable epidemic variations, and new developments in the field of preventive medicine.

Epidemics Are Spasmodic

"Epidemics usually travel from place to place, rarely exploding simultaneously upon a whole state or upon any considerable number of communities within a state. They also travel more at certain seasons of the year than at others. For this reason it is often possible to forestall an outbreak if the people in any particular community know of the approach of an epidemic. Precautionary measures are particularly effective against smallpox, typhoid fever, diphtheria and scarlet fever. Thus it is important to have adequate and sensitive communication facilities established between the State Department of Public Health and the people throughout the state.

"Furthermore, the complexity of modern life makes it increasingly difficult for people to know what to believe or what course to pursue when questions of health come up for decision. Should Johnnie be immunized against scarlet fever? Is whooping cough preventable by vaccination? Will yeast rejuvenate a person? Should the schools be closed to stop an epidemic? Of what value is a school nurse? What are the state quarantine regulations? These and a thousand other health questions come up for repeated answers and the public has a right to expect reliable information about these matters.

First Edition January 1

"For these reasons it seems wise to begin the publication of a biweekly bulletin of a newspaper character which will cover matters of interest in the field of public health. The first edition will be dated January 1, 1929 and will go into the mails next week, according to plans. It will be distributed to mayors, newspapers, health officers, school superintendents and principals, farm bureau and home bureau members, public health nurses and doctors.
