There never was, and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir-the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient-what would relieve one ill. in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in a sound unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use. the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength, by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency; and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep-imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the velne, strengthening the healthy animal the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. HOW THEY SWEAR

Oaths That Obtain in Various Parts of the Assurate Parth. (4.1)

In the various nations there are many curious forms of taking oaths to assure truthfulness A Hindoo law says: "Let a judge swear a Brahmin by his veracity, a soldier by his borses, his elephants or his arms; an agriculturist by his cows his grain or his money; and a Soudra by all his crimes."

In Chinese courts, when a witness is sworn, a live cock is brought into court and the head of the bird cut off. Another Agnew's Cure for the Heart. The people of Arcady swore by the waters of Styx and the Romans by their faith and honor. The Persians swore by the sun, while the Celts in taking an oath laid their hand upon a pillar of stone. . The Russians swear by the cross and the Germans and French by the uplifted hand, as is common with us, concluding with the formula, "So help me God."

Many forms of oaths may be found in Chaucer, Shakespeare and the elder dramatists. Hamlet swears Horatio and Marcellus upon the hilt of his sword, and Touchstone swears Rosalind and Celia by their beards, which they had not, and consequently could not be forsworn. In the Canterbury Tales the prioress swears "by St. Eloy," the host "by my father's soul," the carpenter's wife"by St. Thomas of Kent, " and the merchant "by St. Thomas of Inde."
