CUTTING LIFE SHORT

Life is sweet, and the saint clings to it as tenaciously as the sinner. A prominent preacher was warned by his physician some time since that he must have a change, or take the consequences. He was advised to go to California for six months but emphatically declined, saying that he could not afford the time. "It is California or Heaven," said the medical man firmly. The divine purchased a ticket for for the Coast the following week. To want to die is not a natural thing, to wish to live is common to the oldest patriarch if he is sound in mind and comfortable in circumstances. Yet men mortgage their years as cheerfully as they would a scrub farm. It seems useless to tell a young fool or an old rake that the years of the wicked shall be shortened. They scoff at your warning and rail at your advice. Yet the truth is backed up every day by the death notices in the papers and the attitude of insurance corporations. The latter know well the inevitable and unchangeable penalty of vice and wrongdoing, and guard their interests by refusing to incur the risk of insuring the drunkard and libertine. You can't drain your physical resources constantly to the very dregs with sinful pleasures and build up a constitution. You can't encourage the fires of a dissolute life or feed the fever of an uncurbed passion. Appetite, and come out on the shady side of fifty with physics to carry you to the "three score years and ten." You cannot allow the poison of a corrupt social or business life to permeate your whole being without realizing before you become older than Byron, the words he wrote at thirty five:

"My life is in the mire and yellow leaf
The flower and fruit of hope are gone,
The worm, the canker, and the grief
Are mine."

In Prince Edward Island they are now enjoying prohibition. Some people say that the only difference they notice in many of the old stands is that the signs are taken down. But then all signs fall in dry times.
Those who have been observing the collection plate at Mr. Dowle's meetings at Chicago, say they are still uncertain about his being Elijah, as he says he is, but they think he has some connection with the profits.
Russia is still retreating on account of American duty recently imposed on Russian Coal Oil. Tariff reduction is gradually proceeding and will eventually prove an interesting and intricate study. The jug handled tariff of Uncle Sam is going to be met ere long by European and other nations.
A Washington scientist alleges that he has discovered that potatoes contain a substance known as "solanin," which is poisonous to the human eye. This will not prevent the hardy husbandman getting his usual high price for the early "solanin" holders, or the wicked son of science, in the city taking last year's potatoes, washing them in lye and selling them for this year's "earlies." A little poison now and then, taken with butter and condiments to taste, seems to be the twin brother of spring lamb and gives the microbes within us something to talk about.

A merchant who had two storerooms in small villages tried an experiment. He put a bargain counter in each store containing the same articles at exactly the same prices. In the newspaper of one village he advertised his special counter. In the paper of the other village he did not advertise and sold goods amounting to $984 in the store the same month. In the village where he did advertise, the sold goods amounted to $1,721. In commenting on the result of his experiment that merchant says: "People who got the advertisement would pass by one of my stores and drive miles to the other for what they could have gotten at the same price at my store at their door."
A LITTLE KNOWN ART.
The Tobacco Flavorer Has Short Hours and Draws His Pay.
"A high grade position of which but little is known, except to the 'trade,'" observed a prominent tobacco manufacturer to a Washington Star reporter. "It is what is known as the 'flavorer,' the man who is responsible for the flavor of all the grades of goods made and who sees to it that the flavor is kept the same year in and year out. It matters not where the tobacco that goes in them comes from or the conditions under which it has grown. Of course tobacco manufacturers endeavor to use the same kind of tobacco all the time, but circumstances at times render this impossible.
"As an illustration, our company had bought up and stored away enough tobacco to make up all our brands of smoking tobacco and cigarettes for the year, when all of a sudden our storerooms were destroyed by fire, and our stock went out of existence. There was no more tobacco of that particular grade to be bought, and we were driven into new fields. The tobacco being raised on a different soil and being slightly different as far as seed and stem were concerned, the flavor was also different. Smokers, and chewers as well, insist on the same flavor all the time.
"Here is where the flavorer comes in. By his art and skill he can make tobacco that grows on low lands taste and smell the same as that grown on high lands. He can make tobacco grown during a dry season take the same flavor as that grown during the rainy season. Tobacco grown at different ends of the same state or in different states are by his treatment the same, as far as the consumer is concerned. He draws big money; but, though he comes high, as the traveling show companies say, 'we must have them.'
"As may be imagined, there are not many who are competent to do the work, and as a result they range in salaries all the way from $8 to $10 per day of about one hour's actual work. They are employed, however, but about nine months in each year."

HOW ZULU WOMEN SEW.

They Use Skewers For Needles and Griffe Sews For Thread.
The skill of the Zulus of South Africa in sewing fur is a household word in South Africa, and some of the other tribes compete with them. The needle employed is widely different from that used by the ordinary needlewoman. In the first place, it has no eye; in the second, it is like a skewer, pointed at one end and thick at the other.
The thread is not of cotton, but is made of the sinews of various animals, the best being made from the sinews in the neck of a giraffe. It is stiff, inelastic, with a great tendency to "kink" and tangle itself up with anything near it. Before being used it is steeped in hot water until it is quite soft and is then beaten between two smooth stones, which causes it to separate into filaments, which can thus be obtained of any length and thickness. Thus the seamstress has a considerable amount of labor before she commences with the real work in hand.
Finally she squats on the ground (for no native stands to work or do anything else who can possibly help it) and, taking her needle, bores two holes in the edges of the rug or garment on which she is working. The thread is then pushed through with the butt of the needle, drawn tight, and two more holes are made with a like result, the skewer progressing very slowly, but fast enough for a country where time is of no value whatever.
The skin upon which the seamstress is working is damped with water before she commences, and as the damp thread and hide dry out they bring the work very closely together.

The annual meeting of the Whitty and Lindsay Association of Baptist Churches has begun at Goodwood. The attendance is the largest in years about 200 delegates and visitors having arrived. Tuesday evening, June 18th, was the opening session. Rev. W. Carey officiated as Chairman. Rev. Thos. Cowan of Sunderland, preached the annual sermon, and Rev. W. E. Norton, the new Home Mission Superintendent, delivered a splendid address. Prof. J. W. Russell of Woodstock College eulogized the advantages of the college. Great enthusiasm, spirituality and helpfulness are features of the gathering. The new Moderator appointed is Rev. J. C. McFarlane of Port Perry.
