It is announced that the speed trials on the Berlin-Zooon railway will be resumed next year and the same time work has been begun on another train, especially constructed for the purpose. This train will have a number of remarkable innovations, in the first place it will be covered on tracks with a series of metal plates resembling somewhat the scales of a fish, and these will reduce the matter of wind resistance to a minimum. This was found to be a more serious factor than had been anticipated and is supposed to prove the keynote of success. Another innovation to be tested will be a conduit running along the top of the train to carry the smoke to the rear.

A young man from Belleville on Monday attempted to board the passenger train here when in motion and was thrown to the ground and dragged for a distance. The practice of getting on moving trains is a dangerous one, as the engine of today is very powerful, and develops speed much more rapidly than the older types.

According to the monthly crop report issued by the Washington Government last week, the harvest of all grains this year, with the exception of spring and winter wheat, will be larger than last season. The wheat harvest totals 880 million bushels, being 137,849,218 less than last year, but this is not considered an abnormal decrease, because the yield this year has only been exceeded twice in former years. On the other hand the corn crop is in excess of last harvest, 972,681,109 bushels. Oats, barley, rye and buckwheat have all advanced in proportion, so that on the whole this has been a prosperous year for the farmers of the United States. As foreign credits depend on the character of the harvest the general effect of this good showing is apparent, and trade journals are making the most of it, although they have been claiming all along that the prosperity of the country depends on the protective tariff. The same reasoning applies to the country, and the fact that in every country of Europe the harvest has been adversely affected by bad weather means that the demand abroad will be heavier than usual, which will tend to maintain prices so that for North America, at least another prosperous year would seem to be assured.

Thanksgiving Day has not been arranged for yet, but it is probable it will be observed this year in October.

A case of great interest to more than 2000 farmers in Ontario was decided yesterday by Judge Morgan in the County Court. In 1887 one J. J. Dalrymple commenced the publication in Toronto of what was known as the Canadian Farm Advertiser. His plan was to sell farms in Ontario to British immigrants. He sent agents all over the province and succeeded in inducing many farmers to advertise their farms in this journal, by signing a contract under seal providing that the farm should be advertised by Dalrymple or his assigns for three years, unless sooner sold. In cases where the farm was sold before the expiration of the contract, whether through the agency of The Farm Advertiser or not, the contract provided that Dalrymple was to receive two and one-half per cent upon the price for which the farm was sold, and in case the farm remained unsold at the expiration of the contract the farmer agreed to pay Dalrymple two per cent upon the price which he had advertised his farm for sale. After a number of these agreements Dalrymple obtained loans on them from prominent men in Ontario. Dalrymple's commissions ran from $50 to $400. W. B. Russell, engineer of the Tempearing Railway, advanced money on the security of these contracts and sued Henry A. Cobbe, of Norwich, to recover the amount. Judge Morgan decided that the farmers concerned are all bound by their contracts and must pay up whenever called upon. Farmers would be safer to employ a collector before signing such contracts.
