BOLSHEVIST PROPAGANDA TAKING AWAY SAVINGS

American bankers are much alarmed over Bolshevist propaganda, which, they estimate, is very likely to induce 1,300,000 foreign born persons in the United States to return to their native lands taking with them savings amounting to possibly $4,000,000,000.

If native born Americans had per capita been as thrifty as the foreign born, there would to-day be no anxiety over the possible loss of huge sums of money to foreign countries, for the American will stick to this continent. If he sends his money abroad it will be that the return may come to his own country.

For Canadians the lesson is that all should save so that all, but a small fraction of the country's savings being in the hands of good Canadians, there may be no fear of the permanent loss to Canada of large sums through emigration.

War Savings and Thrift Stamps make it easy for even the humblest Canadian to save and thus concentrate the wealth of this country among the great mass of the people.

The value of Commer- cial Fertilizers

The intelligent use of commercial fertilizers in connection with the growing of garden crops is one of the most important factors that decide whether or not those crops shall yield a profit. The necessity for obtaining the largest possible returns from the area under cultivation is as urgent, perhaps more urgent, today than ever before. Apart from this national necessity, the grower owes it to himself to take advantage of every means that will increase his efficiency and earning power, and in the improvement of our agricultural methods the use of artificial fertilizers takes a leading place.

Barnyard manure will, of course, always remain the foundation fertilizer of all agricultural or garden work. Supplementing barnyard manure with artificial fertilizers is very necessary, however, in order that a proper balance of fertilizing ingredients may be secured. This was clearly shown in a series of experiments conducted at the Experimental Station at Fredericton, N. B., during the summers of 1914, '15, '16, and '17.

In these experiments two plots each of the more common garden vegetables were grown, one plot receiving barnyard manure only at the rate of 30 tons to the acre and the other plot, 15 tons of manure to the acre and certain additions of artificial fertilizer—the fertilizer used depending upon the requirements of the particular crop.

Averaging the results obtained, the plots fertilized with both manure and commercial fertilizer gave an increased yield of 16 per cent over the plots that received manure only. For the individual crops the percent increases in yield were: Beans 8.5, Beets 8, Carrots 14, Celery 15, Onions 12, and Tomatoes 38.5.

Not only were the yields larger from the plots receiving both manure and fertilizer, but the quality of the product was improved in practically every case, and, especially with the tomatoes, the date of maturity or ripening was very much earlier.

One of the most outstanding features of these experiments was, that the increased yields, improved quality and earlier maturity were obtained at considerably less cost. The artificial fertilizers applied cost from $6.00 to $9.00 per acre on the various plots, or an average of $7.50. Taking barnyard manure at $1.00 per ton, we find the "manure only" plots cost $30.00 per acre for fertilizing and the "manure and fertilizers" plots, $22.80.

This shows fairly conclusively that a judicious combination of barnyard manure and commercial fertilizers is of paramount importance in the growing of garden produce.
