Anna Scott, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Scott was taken to the Toronto General Hospital on Saturday to have a piece of a needle removed from her foot. On Tuesday when she was in the sewing room wearing a pair of woollen slippers, when she stepped on a needle lying on the carpet the needle broke in two making it necessary to use the X-rays to locate the piece left in her foot. She returned from the hospital on Sunday.

Don't be too hard on Port Hope. It may not be as enterprising as it was seventy-five years ago, but it must be better morally. In 1884 the town of 1200 people had five distilleries, one brewery and four churches. It is fair to say that the residents did not themselves consume all the product of the "gin mills." 429 casks of whiskey were exported—also ten tons of rags.—Orillia Packet.
