Glimpses of Free Biography

Dr. and Mrs. Ira Freel of Stouffville, were present at the first Freel re-union held at Thamesford, on May 25th, 1925. Although the Freels are not numerous in this neighborhood, yet along the Thames, Niagara Peninsula, and especially in Michigan they are as thick as leaves on a tree, and something of their early history will be of interest to our readers.

The Freels came from Kilkenny, Ireland, where they lived for a long time, but they were originally of Huguenot stock. Being ardent protestants they did not harmonize with their Roman Catholic neighbors, at a time when people took their religion less tolerantly, and so moved to New York State, where they settled on 2200 acres of land. During the revolutionary war of 1775, they took the side of England, and when the Americans gained their independence, the victorious army burned their buildings, ran off their stock and such neighborly acts that were fashionable at that period. Great Britain to compensate for this loss and as a reward for their loyalty gave land at Niagara and along the Thames, which their descendants hold to this day.

In the war of 1812 John Freel had charge of a cannon, which he spiked before falling into the hands of the Americans. Later John himself was killed in action. His wife Deborah, lies buried in Butler's cemetery, which at the present time is kept in good condition by the Dominion Government.

The old timers were broad shouldered, deep chested men, and generally took an active part in any political movements. These original United Empire Loyalists were naturally High Church Tories, but the doings of the Family Compact in Canadian history estranged many, so that both sides of politics are now represented.

The Clan historian Dr. Freel of Glencoe, Ontario, relates that in the war 1812, the United Empire Loyalists were very bitter against the Americans who had so recently dispossessed them, and almost to a man joined the British forces. One Freel was favorably mentioned in the army despatches for having, with a group of comrades, slipped across the line and cut out a bunch of cattle from the American army, swimming the critters across the river, hanging on to their tails so that they could be guided to the right landing spot. As the supplies in the Canadian-British army were low, the beef was a welcome addition.

The Clan historian also spoke of a family of Freels (father and nine strapping sons) who lived in Western Ontario in the early days, and kept the community in a ferment by their "doings", but they fell under the spell of a "circuit rider", who induced them to go to camp meeting. There they were converted to a man, and their neighbors said that in a twinkling of an eye they were changed from roaring roisterons into old time Methodists, which, while it may not have lessened the noise, was a blessed change to the whole community.

This first re-union was held at the homestead of Walter and Charles Freel, (beautifully situated on the Thames river), who acted the part of hosts in a kindly, efficient manner. Childhood, youth, manhood, and retrospective old age were all represented. The day was spent in feasting, games, and best of all listening to tales of yore by the old timers. The re-union ended with a vote of thanks to Dr. Freel of Glencoe, president, Harold Bishop, Norwich, secretary, and Miss Catherine Freel, Niagara, corresponding secretary, who at the expense of a great deal of work were instrumental in making the first Freel gathering an interesting event.

Chicken stealing is again becoming very prevalent in the south part of Pickering township as well as in the adjoining townships. A number of farmers report that they have lost heavily from these thefts during the past week or two. Among those whose hen-houses have been invaded are: Wm. Puckrin, of Audley, and the Hutching Brothers, of the Brock Road. At Mr. Puckrin's the thieves were disturbed before they had secured any booty, but in their hurry to get away they left behind them a bag of fowl with their necks broken, and which had been stolen elsewhere. On Friday night last Hutching Bros. had their flock depleted to the extent of about forty fowl. Certain parties are suspected but no evidence can be secured to fasten the guilt upon them.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE IN HEALTHY CONDITION

The Stouffville Women's Institute have just completed another successful year, and the annual meeting was held recently, at which Mrs. H. Porter was the hostess.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. Davey, was received with keen interest, and it showed that the year just closed was one to be proud of. Mrs. Hugh Boyd and Mrs. W. Hill, verified the report given by Mrs. Davey, in their capacity as auditors. Mrs. H. J. Malloy retired from the presidency after four years of faithful work, and the election of officers ensued as follows:

President—Mrs. Geo. T. Lee
1st Vice-Prest.—Mrs. H. J. Malloy
2nd Vice-Prest.—Mrs. W. Hill
Sec.-Treas.—Mrs. E. J. Davey

A strong program-committee was formed, also other officers were appointed to the directorate, social committee, etc.

The financial statement for the year is as follows:

RECEIPTS
Cash in bank	$157.78
Receipts for the year	658.98
	$816.76
EXPENDITURE
From May 1924 to 1925	$531.44
Cash in bank, May 1925	285.32

TO SELL NEWMARKET HOTEL

44 beer is the cause of strife between the shareholders and the directors of the King George Hotel at Newmarket. The former claim that they were not consulted when the directors decided to apply for a license to sell the new beverage and that the directors have broken the agreement under which the shares were sold. It also causes the offering of the hotel for sale.

When Sir James Whitney introduced his local option measure it appeared as though Newmarket was going to be without a hotel as the owner was closing up the place. A group of business men organized a company and sold shares to residents of the town under the assurance that the hotel would be strictly temperance house. Many people bought one, two and in some cases five shares. With the passing of the Ontario Temperance Act, the management decided to sell the temperance beer, 2½ per cent. Some shareholders object to selling the new beverage as they claim they do not want to participate in the business.
