GOOD CATTLE PICKED UP

United States cattle buyers are going to make Canadian pay more for their meat, milk, cheese and butter, in all probability, if they keep up there present pace in buying cattle in Ontario, both for beef and for milk. Hoover's expected "higher than Man" tariff is given as the reason of the exceptional cattle buying activity noticeable at present.

SYNOPSIS OF BEN HUR

"Ben-Hur," a tale of the Christ, begins in Jerusalem in the days of the reign of Herod, Judah Ben-Hur, the son of a wealthy Jew and Messala, the son of a Roman, have been friends since childhood. But when Ben-Hur becomes seventeen and Messala nineteen their friendship ends because of their racial difference.
 Shortly after, Valerius Gratus, the new-Roman ruler of Jerusalem, is leading an army through the streets when Ben-Hur, leaning from a window, accidentally dislodges a bit of tiling, which falls the Roman leader.
 Messala, the former friend, denounces Ben-Hur as having purposely thrown the stone, and the Romans take Ben-Hur away to serve as a galley slave for life, drive his mother and sister Tirzah into cruel imprisonment and seized all his property.
 Ben-Hur vows vengeance upon Messala.
 For three years Ben-Hur serves as a slave in a Roman war galley, and his education and nobility win the friendship of the commander, Arrius. One night a desperate conflict takes place between the Roman fleet and pirates, the galley is sunk and Ben-Hur saves his commander from drowning. In gratitude, Arrius, a wealthy Roman, adopts him, thus giving him his freedom. Ben-Hur, naturally of powerful physique, receives training in arms from the Romans.
 But he longs to find his mother and sister and sets out for the East to find them. At Antioch he finds Simonides, a former slave of his father who has since become a wealthy merchant. Simonides has saved the wealth left Ben-Hur in spite of tortures applied by the Romans.
 Ben-Hur falls in love at first sight with Esther, the beautiful blonde daughter of Simonides. She returns his affection.
 Ben-Hur is obsessed with a thirst to avenge himself against Rome, and he goes into the desert, to enlist the support of Sheikh Ilderim, the Generous, in war against his sworn foe.
 He learns that there is to be a great chariot race at Antioch and that Messala, who is now a great Roman soldier, is the favorite to win and that Messala and his friends are wagering their entire fortunes on the race. Ben-Hur makes plans to enter the race at Antioch and to crush his enemy, Messala.
 Meanwhile he has met Iras, daughter of Balthasar, and this seductive Egyptian beauty has fallen in love with him.
 On the day of the race both Ester and Iras are in the huge crowd in the amphitheatre. Iras is an admirer of Messala as well as of Ben-Hur. Ben-Hur not only wins, but avenges the wrong on the part of his friend by catching the wheel of the Roman's chariot. In his own, thus causing Messala to be thrown into the dirt. The hoofs of the flying horses of the other chariots pass over his body and he is crippled for life. Ben-Hur's victory makes him a great hero among his own people.
 Meanwhile, Ben-Hur's mother and sister have been confined in a prison as lepers and he rescues them.
 He marries Esther and they are happy.
 Mrs. Whitmer of Aurora has been re-elected treasurer of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association.
