FARMERS OVERCOME WET SPRING SET-BACK

Special Article Written for, Stouffville "Tribune" by Professor W. J. Squirrel Ontario Agricultural College

Peas and Oats.

This mixture, sown at the rate of 2 bushels of oats and 1 bushel of peas per acre, makes an excellent annual hay crop. Varieties well suited for growing in the mixture are O. A. C. No. 144 or Banner Oats along with Golden Vine. O. A. C. No. 181. McKay or Prussian Blue peas. Best hay from the mixture is produced if the crop is cut when the pea pods are about one-half grown. It is handled and cured like any other hay crop. In addition to being an excellent annual hay crop the above mixture makes a first-class soiling crop. The best result from using this mixture have been obtained when it was sown early in the season, but with favorable weather following, it can be sown as late as May 24th with good results. Vetches are sometimes included in the above combination but experiments at Guelph and the experience of farmers in Western Ont. indicate that a smaller yield per acre is obtained. Both Hairy and Common Vetch—seed is quite expensive.

BUSINESS TALK TO THE FARMERS

Changing Conditions Demands Skilled Yeomen.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, who is quite well known to Stouffville and district gave an address the other day before the Lindsay Kiwanian Club. He said many interesting and true things of interest to all, especially the farmer, of which many were present at the gathering.

"Hon. Duncan Marshall said in part: 'These are changing days and conditions on the farm are changing just as they are in the cities and towns. The farmers of today must know all about their work. They must study, they must be trained if they want to know the game of production and marketing. There was a time when the large fat animal captured all the prizes—the bigger the animal the better. Conditions have changed however and today well developed animals are necessary, but the people are demanding 'baby beef' and farmers must specialize in 'baby beef.' The contour of the bacon hog has been changed and the farmer who knows how to raise the best hogs today in order to get the best price, must specialize on what is termed slab bacon, and in this respect Canada has captured the bacon market of the world.'

Farmers today are not breeding as many sheep as they should, but despite this fact, the production of sheep is also on the increase. To day Canadian farmers, especially in some parts of Ontario, are going in stronger for dairy cattle and they do not like to see the sheep clipping off the good grass that the dairy cattle should have. Wool production, however, is still very profitable in the old days, the speaker said, it took the entire wool off of one sheep to clothe one woman, while today one silk worm does the job.

"Business men have greatly helped the farmers of late years in the matter of co-operation in organization, especially in the holding of fall fairs and live stock shows. This branch of work has helped the farmers more than anything else to take an interest in the production of the right kind of stock. Citizens of Lindsay should give their whole-hearted support to the Lindsay Fair.

"What agriculture lacks most in this country today is education. Young farmers are not being trained, and the tendency is to get them off the farms into some other branch of professional life. There are today some ten thousand students in the Universities and less than 1,000 in the agricultural colleges. There should be an effort to build so as to educate the farmers sons and daughters and to endeavour to help them like conditions on the farm by making these conditions likeable and profitable.

The farmer himself is largely to blame for these conditions. They in many cases pay little attention to the kind of cows or other animals they have, and work on the farm becomes a drudgery, instead of a pleasure. The farmers of the future must be trained. In the past boys and girls of the farm have failed to recognize the great opportunities in farming in Ontario. In fact the farmers of today have to have just a little better training than the boys in other occupations of life. They must learn the difference between good and bad cows, the condition of the soil they are cultivating, the condition of the markets they seek. Many a boy has quit the farm because his father gave him the worst or the hardest cows to milk.

Life on the farm should not be from one piece of drudgery to another. Farmers should endeavour to have real good stock, especially if they wish to keep their boys on the farm. The farm is in a sense a real chemical laboratory and the farmer must study the proper cultivation of the soil. If the farmers studied conditions then there would be a more happy and contented lot of farmers. Farm work is fascinating and difficult."
