

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Fresh cider for sale at 25c gallon. C. Barkey Phone 6606.

Notice—Anyone wishing to purchase hand made linen handkerchiefs, (all colors) can get them by calling on, Miss J. Grice. South of Swifts Garage.

Do not overlook the auction sale of household furniture today (Thursday) at the residence of Dr. Dales.

We do not canvass for subscriptions instead we offer a bargain. The Tribune from now to Dec. 31, 1931, to new subscribers. Start now and get the most for your money.

Eggs held at 50 cents a dozen on the market here last week, but few farmers have any to offer, which probably is the reason for the high price.

The voltage on the local electric system has suddenly gone wrong again. Let's have it stepped up without so much delay. Around six o'clock in the evening the lights are noticeably dull. The H.E.P.C. have been notified about it.

Lost—Small brass key, about two inches long, near the Canadian Bank of Commerce, or on Church St. Finder kindly leave same at Tribune Office.

An evening with the poets, in the United Church, on Monday November 24th. You will enjoy the treat being provided by the dramatic group of the Swastika Society. Old and young alike are invited.

Coming—Dr. F. E. Luke, Optometrist, 167 Yonge St., Toronto's able eyesight specialist may be consulted about your eyes for glasses at J. Boardway's drug store, Stouffville, Thursday November 20th.

Mr. Amos. Lehman has been in business in Stouffville for 41 years, but he hasn't forgot how to make a pair of shoes if the occasion demanded it. There are still customers of his store who recall the days when Mr. Lehman made their boots rather than selecting them from stock as is done today.

The selection this Christmas of personal greeting cards is really worth looking over at The Tribune office. Make your choice from the large variety of cards, and have your name neatly printed thereon. Priced from $1.50-dozen to $7.

The Stouffville Women's Liberal Association is packing a box for the needy unemployed of Toronto, to be forwarded through the well-known Fred Victor Mission. Any donations of clothing, fruit, vegetables, home-baking or candy, from members and friends of the Association will be greatly appreciated. Donations may be left at the home of the president, Miss E. Sangster, on or before December 2.

Dr. Booth, a former pastor of the Stouffville Methodist church, but who for some years has been a supernumerary minister, has so far recovered from his recent illness as to be able to return to his home in Toronto from the hospital. His recovery at one time was very doubtful but his friends will be glad to know he is now improving.

The electric radio given by the Stouffville War Veterans to the lucky ticket holder at the draw which was made on Saturday evening at the Auditorium Theatre was won by Mr. A. C. Burkholder, former bank manager. Only a couple of months ago Mr. Burkholder purchased a new radio, which indicates that he hadn't much faith in drawing a lucky ticket. The fortunate ticket was No. 1176.

Writing from Edinburgh, Scotland, on October 30, Mr. A. E. Talbert, member of the colored quintette which drew such large crowds at Stouffville during the camp meetings last summer, writes to Rev. S. S. Shantz here telling of the remarkable success Evangelist John Thomas and the singers are meeting with on their overseas trip which is nearing a close. The group sail again for New York on Dec. 6th on the Baltic. Mr. Talbert who is secretary of the quintette reports that the party is all well, and that neither Bro. Lacey nor any of the others were sick going over. No one missed a meal on the entire voyage. Their campaign opened in Glasgow, and they were successful in winning souls from the first night. The last two services in that city held in the largest hall failed to hold the crowds, and they had to lock the doors with over 3000 inside while the police said another 3,000 were outside. In Manchester during a six day campaign 150 people took their stand for Christ, while equal or more success was met with in East London among the Jewish sections where no less than 50 descendants of Abraham swung to the Christian religion. At the time of writing the meetings were being held in the big assembly hall where Moody and Shanley held their great meetings, but the tour will be completed with a campaign in Ireland. There is the possibility that the quintette will be heard again in Stouffville next summer.

W. I. Afternoon Tea and baking sale at Porters' Nov. 22nd

$90 was collected for the poppy day fund in town.

The gasoline war in Detroit has brought gas down to nine gallons for a dollar. This is one kind of war that would be appreciated in Canada. Let her go boys!

Saturday, November 22, the Senior Women's Institute will hold an afternoon tea and sale of home-made baking, and candy in Porters Ice Cream parlor. Hot tea biscuits made during the afternoon. Open at 3 p.m.

A well-attended meeting of the Women's Liberal Association was held on Tuesday evening of last week. An interesting travel talk was given by Mrs. George Storry, and Mrs. Harvey Moyer delighted the members with a humorous reading.

Do not delay ordering your personal greeting cards for Christmas. The Tribune office has a full stock, and you may order now, and get them Christmas week. This will also give us time for printing. Big range in prices from $1.50 to $7.

Walter Nesbitt, on a charge of stealing a pig from ex-reeve Morgan Baker of Whitchurch, has been set free on the charge after making restitution to Mr. Baker of $75. The case came before Magistrate Keith.

The local Chinaman who conducts the laundry and who was rushed to the hospital one night a couple of weeks ago, is making progress toward recovery. He was found to be suffering from appendicitis, and was operated on a few hours after being admitted to the General Hospital. Two celebrities from the city came out to look after the laundry during the interval.

In view of some misapprehension on the part of ratepayers it is timely to state that the memorial Park Property in which the guns were dedicated on Nov. 9 to the memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice was deeded to the corporation by the Stouffville Board of Trade free of all incumbrance. The corporation came into possession of the property without any cost to the municipality whatsoever so far as the peoples' taxes are concerned.

Although no official figures will be made known until the first of the year, Reeve James Muirhead, of North York Township, announced last week that the Metropolitan radial line is on a paying basis and will show a surplus in revenue. Reeve Muirhead said that in the case of deficit, it was arranged with the T.T.C. that the deficit, if any should be paid each three months. There has been no demand for such a margin and it is likely that North York, Markham, Vaughan Townships and Richmond Hill Village will realize a profit.

In view of his departure from Stouffville to make his home in Toronto, the officers and members of Stouffville I.O.O.F. have presented Dr. F. A. Dales with a purse of gold and a complimentary address. The doctor is a charter member of the local lodge and has been identified with every phase of its work, as well as being a past grand master, an honor which came to him a few years ago. Mrs. Dales, past worthy matron of Jubilee Chapter, order of the Eastern Star, will also be keenly missed in her chapter, as well as from the community at large. The removal of the Dales from town will leave a gap that will not soon be filled in our community life.

James Hill of the 9th concession of Whitchurch who was a caller at the Tribune office last week, is probably the oldest or nearly oldest farmer actively engaged today in that work in the township where he resides. Mr. Hill is in his 88th year, but notwithstanding this great age takes his part in doing the farm work with his son at home, the two of them working the 100 acre farm together. It is an interesting fact that this well preserved citizen was born just across the road from the farm where he now lives, consequently he has spent his long life within a short radius from where he first saw the light of day. He was a fully grown man when the railway first went through here, and remembers quite distinctly the long journeys to market prior to that time, for they had to go to Newmarket or Toronto in the very early days to get their grain ground. Of a family of eleven brothers and sisters Mr. Hill is one of four still surviving and he is the oldest of the four. To him and the late Mrs. Hill who died when 54 years of age nine children were born, eight now living, being four girls and four boys. As an indication of Mr. Hill's ability to work at the age of 88, just a few weeks ago he dug sixty bags of potatoes with a hoe without assistance.

Early Monday morning fire broke out causing damage estimated at $3,500 completely destroyed a large barn, along with two cows, and two horses, on the Dunlop Farm, Richmond Hill.

A Voice From Toronto

Dear Sir—As one of your readers at a distance, to whom Councillor Ward's letter in your issue of Oct. 30, was addressed would you please find space for a reply to it in your next issue. The bitter hate toward Mr. Whitcombe shown in Mr. Ward's letter compels me to write not to defend Mr. Whitcombe (he needs no defence), but rather to plead with Mr. Ward to consider the dreadful thing he has done. Here is a young minister of the gospel laboring in your midst for years early and late obeying the Divine command, follow him from Baker Hill to the Sixth Line church from there to Mount Albert and on to the Baptist Seminary in Toronto, and find out how much time he has left to sleep when his day's work is done. He sees something in Stouffville, a sin against God, and a disgrace to the community, from the pulpit he denounces it, and challenges the people of Stouffville to prevent a repetition of it. Immediately Mr. Ward, a Councillor, one time minister of the gospel, by his own admission an old man, jumps on him and informs the public there was only 50 people drunk and disorderly and that out of seven churches in Stouffville there was (one) minister who did try to stop the gambling on that occasion. Let me remind Mr. Ward his letter failed to show that one single thing Mr. Whitcombe said in his address was untrue. He also as a follower of Jesus failed miserably to point out that there was in that address a grand offer of Salvation from sin which people are crying out for, and so seldom get in the so-called christian churches, and I would ask Mr. Ward to line up with Mr. Whitcombe and not against him and rejoice that there is in his neighbourhood, something extraordinary, a young minister who prefers to bear the reproach of Christ rather than the favor of men. Yours Sincerely W. F. McIlreath Humewood Drive, Toronto From The Wilderness

Dear Mr. Editor:—You know we have been greatly took up lately with that debate what's been going on in your most respected paper. That Mr. Whitcombe certainly started something when he preached that sermon about the Stouffville sinners. Seems as if we're all heading for the nether regions; Dante wrote a book about it called "Dante's inferno" and Gustave Doré drew pictures of it, one place for the lesser sinners being "hotter" the denser and to their place for the big shots being frozen cold so you see Mr. Editor it ain't a very nice place to get thrown into, no matter how you look at it. But along comes Mr. Ward and says as how Mr. Whitcombe is full of hops or something to that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to make out that Mister Ward was vituperative—which sounds real mean. But just to give you our opinion—this well-meaning cleric should have tied the can to the celebration long before it ever took place—failing that he might have gathered up all those fellows what was lickered up like he said and preached them the sermon and left us what didn't get any of that alleged fire-water, out of it. Then in the last place we can't see where he had any right to interfere at all either before or after that effect so we picked up courage again and then said Whitcombe tries to