That this curious looking boat can travel on both land and water? Many of this type are used in northern Canada to haul booms of logs across large lakes during the spring drives. When it is necessary to move one of these boats from one lake to another, cables are fastened from a capstan on the boat to the bole of a large tree and the boat pulls itself under its own power across the portage.

Lincoln's Inn Fields

Behind It's Present Day Dignity Lies Romantic Days of the Past

The neighborhood of Lincoln's Inn Fields has for so long been associated with the Law that one forgets its former fashionable character. When cows still chewed the cud in Mayfair, the "quality" lived in the great houses facing the greenery of the Fields. The ubiquitous Pepys was often to be found-there, visiting the home of his friend and patron. Lord Sandwich: was it not on one visit that he tore his fine, new camelot cloak on the latch of the door-a mishap which, as he records, "troubled him," until his tailor skilfully mended it again?

As Lord Wakefield, one | - Paul Engle in Poetry. of the City's greatest modern benefactors, says in his introduction to Col. Temperature of Air Robert Blickham's "The Sovereign City," London is "solid" history in the same sense-as the River Thames is said to be "liquid" history. The London that Colonel Blackham shows us is the "wonderful Square Mile which down the ages has maintained a character and influence superior to that of any other community in England or elsewhere." He traces its twenty centuries of stirring history, lets us see the complicated wheels of government turning, and talks familiarly of its monuments and bridges, banks and 10 above at the surface. Yet another aspect of the City is dealt with in "The London County Council From Within." Here are the forty years' official recollections of Sir Harry Hawad, late Comptroller of the L.C.C., and Electricity Commissioner from 1920 to 1930. He witnessed the birth of the Council in 1889, having already served for several years in the office of its predecessor, the Metropolitan Board of Works.
