When a vote of the congregation was polled in the United Church last Sunday morning on the question of closing off the Sunday evening service for the next four weeks, Mr. G. R. W. Thomas, Sunday School Superintendent, church caretaker, and courier of His Majesty's Royal Mail, definitely established himself as the "lone voter" because for the second year in succession G. R. W. stood alone for keeping "open house" as it were. Not that everyone present voted to apply the closure process but when the minister called for those opposed to closing off the evening service, the caretaker on whom falls much of the work, stood out in bold relief as a symbol of "Sabbath as usual". He was the sole one to cast his vote for a Sunday evening service. A few declined to vote at all. -

The chief reason for closing down instead of engaging a supply minister while the regular one absent on holidays, is said to be that the attendance is so small that such action is not warranted, either from the financial or spiritual point of
