Mrs. Adam Wideman of Markham who died this week in her 35th year, was laid to rest in the Wideman Mennonite cemetery on the 8th concession. She was a member of a pioneer Burkholder family in the district, and was quite well known in Stouffville. Years ago, the late Mrs. Wideman with her husband, lived in this village when he was engaged as a driver on the bread wagon for the late J. B. Wurts. They lived on Church street south for some time in the house now owned by Miss Laura Forsyth. Mr. Wideman died some years ago, and one son Benjamin, and one daughter survive the parents.

LEMONVILLE

176 voted at Lemonville on Monday, which is very small considering there are 300 voters in the division. The poor condition of the cross roads prevented many electors turning out. Only 18 people came over from the sixth concession whereas there are more than 85 voters on the line. In all we are told that 3377 crosses were actually marked over the whole Township, but one elector had the privilege of marking four crosses or putting in a "plunker". There was 2400 voters on the list for Monday's contest.

The mercury took a nose dive last Thursday night, and residents arose Friday morning to find it 18 or 20 below zero, according to the location of thermometers in the village. Like individuals they do not all tell exactly the same story. Anyway it was bitter cold, but it rapidly rose to just above zero as a beautiful sunny morning unfolded.

The turnip market is slightly improved with farmers realizing 10 bushel at the local C.N.R. depot. The shipper, R.E. Brown continues to send out cars almost daily, but the U.S. demand from New York has noticeably slackened due to over a hundred car loads of turnips arriving from the Marathimes, flooding the market somewhat.

John Crawford, Whitechurch Township clerk, was in the village Friday morning starting out with the eight ballot boxes for the various polling divisions in readiness for Monday's election. He was able to reach most of the deputy returning officers by motor car, but it was necessary to travel by foot for several miles parking the car on the main highways. One thing lacking in the township is a good winter road running through the heart of the township from east to west. The township is very well served with county roads running north and south.

John Powers of Guelph was in town over the holiday season visiting his mother Mrs. Catherine Bruels and sister Miss Ella Powers, living in The Terrace, on Albert street. Mrs. Bruel, if she lives until May 24 next will reach her 91st birthday. Although unable to leave her bed any more, and practically stricken with blindness, Mrs. Bruels retains an alert mind, and her one big joy at Christmas was the remembrances sent her by the Institute and by friends in town, whom she wishes us to publicly thank for her. Mrs. Bruels and daughter are well known in the Ringwood district where they lived for long years, and until they moved to town about 12 years ago.

A quiet wedding took place at the abode of Rev. E. Morton last Saturday night, when Olive Blanche Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Baker, became the wife of Garnet Francis Vanzant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Vanzant. We wish them a life of daily happiness as they live on the tenth of Markham.

The sudden change in the weather last Saturday from extreme cold to fog and rain, left the Main street in a terrible condition, with a foot of slush in the business section. At time of writing the rain is doing its best to melt the snow away, but its as much as elderly people can do to make a safe crossing from oneside to other of the street.

Markham village voted on Monday to wipe out the sale of beer in the two hotels there by 396 to 223; The three-fifths required to carry the vote is 360, thus there was a surplus of 24 votes over the required three-fifths. It was conceded by both wet and dry advocates in the neighboring village to be a close contest, and the success of the dry element will be quite a blow to the hotel keepers in Markham who have tried to administer the law in proper manner. However, the result of a vote is a protest against the public sale of beer in the village and not a declaration against the hotel keepers who of course will feel it most. As licenses have been granted for the period to October 1935, it is expected the vendors will have the next ten months to wind up their beer business.

The remains of the late John Potter were interred in Stouffville cemetery on Sunday afternoon, the funeral cortege coming from Toronto accompanied by a number of friends and relatives. Deceased was 55 years of age, and was connected with this village through his wife who was Miss Hettie Smith before her marriage. Her widowed mother married Chas. Radmore, but of the original Smith family there is Mrs. Potter and George Smith living, he being the local photographer here at one time. The widow Smith, as she was known before her second marriage, lived with her family in a house which occupied the site where George Saunders' Store stands in the Ratcliff block at the corner of Main and Mill streets. The old building which stood there is quite well remembered by some of our present citizens.

"QUALITY"

Grain Market

Barley.—There is some activity in this grain but the price has remained about the same on account of the lower freight rate which the Canadian West has into the markets of St. Paul and Chicago. If we are able to keep our quality of barley up to the standard we have shipped, there will be very little harm with this reduction to our barley at the prevailing prices.

Oats—This grain is due for a long pull. There are heavy deliveries in other parts of the country. Through this section few Oats have been sent to the market. There will be heavy deliveries later on which will have a tendency to hold the market steady.

Buckwheat—It is getting to the time of the year when buckwheat should be put on the market. There has been a small raise in the market and we are in a position to take any quantity.
