Clergyman Holds Services In Parishioners' Homes

A young vicar in Newcastle-on-Tyne, Eng., has found a new way of keeping his flock in touch with the Gospel-he takes the church to them. Most of the parishioners of St Jude's cannot afford Sunday clothes to attend service, so the Rev. Ralph Rumney decided to hold services in their homes.

With a band of willing workers, Mr. Rumney initiated his movement this week in a two-roomed tenement -the home of an $7-year-old widow.

Members of the church choir at tended the house service, and the widow's neighbors, many of them wearing shawls, joined in the hymns led by Mr. Rumney, his choirboys and church workers.

It is understood that this is the first time any clergyman has held such a service but Mr. Rumney intends, if there is sufficient demand, to hold them nightly.
