

Noted Publisher Dies In Victoria

Publisher of Vancouver Sun Was Internationally-Known Canadian

VICTORIA, — Robert J. Cromie, newspaper publisher, traveller and commentator on world events, died suddenly here last week. Cardiac trouble was given by Coroner E. C. Hart as the probable cause of death.

All British Columbia and his scores of friends in Canada and many lands mourned his death. "British Columbia's loss is great," said Premier Pattullo when informed of Mr. Cromie's death. His expression was echoed everywhere.

Mr. Cromie knew men in all walks of life and in all countries of the world. A great traveller he visited foreign lands on every opportunity but it was the great Pacific area that held his strongest interests.

Mr. Cromie talked often with government leaders in China and Japan. After one visit to the Orient he came back to Canada more impressed than ever with the importance of the Pacific area. "The historic event of our time," he said, "will not be the Great War or the great depression—it will be the modernization of Asia."

Appeared Youthful
A vigorous man who looked even more youthful than his 48 years, there was no indication to the casual observer that he enjoyed anything but the best of health.

The travel portion of his life, years which he devoted to study of world events in political, economic, social and cultural aspects, and to a multitude of interests impossible to a man of less energy, came after he had consolidated his position as a publisher.

The son of Henry James Cromie, a native of Ireland, and Sarah Cromie, a native of Australia, he received his early education in the public schools and a business college in the eastern townships of Quebec. He came West in 1906 worked in many capacities for three years, all the time going to night school and business college, until he joined the staff of Foley, Welch and Stewart, contractors, with whom he was connected for 10 years.

Acquiring private means he entered the publishing field and reorganized and consolidated the Vancouver Sun, the News Advertiser and the Vancouver World into the Vancouver Sun, an evening newspaper.

He married Bernadette Grace McFeely, daughter of E. J. McFeely, Vancouver, in 1912. Four sons and one daughter survive.

Stopping Accidents Means Actual Cash

"Safety Influence" Vital Factor in Ontario Industrial Plants

TORONTO—“If you don't stop accidents, who will?” was the challenge given by E. E. Sparrow, of Toronto, retiring president of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association, to 1,376 plant executives and safety experts who assembled recently for their annual two-day convention at the Royal York hotel in Toronto.

Industrial safeguarding of plants and workers was the chief responsibility of employers, Mr. Sparrow declared, and every effort must be made to demonstrate to employees that “accident prevention means actual cash to them.” This, coupled with the steadily growing interest of executives, showed that industry in Ontario was taking advantage of the remarkable services rendered by the organization for employer and employee.

At the opening of the convention, meetings were held of the ten safety associations, representing 17 different classes of industry under compensation, which constitute the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations. The members of these associations, according to R. B. Morley, general manager, make their “safety influence” left in nearly 10,000 industrial plants in Ontario, with payrolls totalling over $250,000,000.

An outstanding evidence of the interest in the work of the associations was indicated by the international greetings that had been received from safety organizations in 15 different countries.

A feature of the convention was the rehabilitation clinic which had been moved from the Workmen's Compensation Board Headquarters for the convention, so that its methods and results could be thoroughly appreciated by those in attendance.

A patent was recently issued on a method for coating autos with rubber for shipment. The rubber is sprayed on in liquid form.

COULD NOT SLEEP FOR NEURITIS

How She Found Relief

This woman suffered so much from neuritis that she found it difficult to get a good night's sleep. Other sufferers will be interested in her letter:

“Some years ago I had a stubborn attack of neuritis in both arms. At night I turned from side to side without sleep. Then my right hand got so stiff I couldn't bend it. Next my left foot got so bad I got out of bed with difficulty. So I had to have the doctor and give up work. I was afraid I couldn't get relief. He told me quite casually to take a little salt every morning. I tried a small dose of Kruschen Salts regularly, and the remarkable difference it made in a few weeks was almost unbelievable. Needless to say I have continued it ever since.” — (Miss) E.V.B.

Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid—frequently the cause of rheumatic pains. Other ingredients of Kruschen assist Nature to expel the dissolved acid from the system.

Control of Arms Urged by Britain

LONDON — The British Government has presented a four-point proposal for uniform international regulation of the arms traffic to the Royal Arms Commission.

It embraced a Foreign Office memorandum described as the result of 14 years of experience in international discussions.

The government, it was stated, considered an achievement of great value could be obtained if the principal arms manufacturing countries would agree to a convention accepting the following principles:

1. Strict national control of arms manufacture.
2. Publicity for arms produced, exported and imported.
3. Establishment of an international supervisory organ.
4. Responsibility of an international supervisory organ.
5. Responsibility to that organ for the accuracy of returns on manufacture and trade.

The memorandum also stated the government favored conclusion of an international agreement regarding arms manufacture and trade.

The Royal Commission has been investigating private arms manufacture.

How Great Britain Balances Budgets

While the British press is busy grumbling about the new British budget, the American press, by and large, expresses admiration for John Bull's budget-balancing feats and is inclined to ask how on earth he does it, observes the Montreal Star. The New York Times pursues the subject far enough to show that the United States takes its taxation principally from the corporations and the “big fellows,” whereas Britain taxes the “man in the street.” It produces a table of considerable interest showing how much income tax is paid in each country, after deductions, by a typical taxpayer, in this case a married man, whose income is wholly “earned,” and who has to support two children.

| | (Personal Income Tax) | U.S.A. | Britain |
|------------|-----------------------|---------|---------|
| Net Income | 1,000 | 0 | 0 |
| | 2,000 | 0 | 7 |
| | 5,000 | 48 | 484 |
| | 10,000 | 343 | 1,533 |
| | 100,000 | 31,702 | 46,336 |
| | 1,000,000 | 678,346 | 632,357 |

It will be seen at once that the Briton in the lower and middle brackets pays far more than his American equivalent. It is only when the very highest brackets are reached that the American approaches and, in the case of the million-a-year man, outstrips the Briton as an income-tax milch cow.

In other words, this burden is far more widely distributed in Great Britain. It should be added, of course, that the Federal income tax does not tell anything like the entire story in American, since various States also mulct the citizen in income taxes, and since the United States provides a plethora of nuisance taxes—such as the New York City sales tax—such as we do in Canada. But the general picture remains tolerably true, with the Americans “soaking the rich” more and more.

King Solomon, he of the thousand wives, was called to the telephone. It was his physician on the wire.

Doctor (enthusiastically)—I have big news for you!
King Solomon—What is it?
Doctor (excitedly)—Thus far today, you are the father of 16 children.

King Solomon—Just a moment. I'll connect you with the bookkeeping department.

Man—You seem to have a bad cold, old man. What are you doing for it?
Friend—Today I'm doing what Jones told me to do. It's Smith's day tomorrow, and the next is Anderson's. If I'm not better by Monday, and if I'm still alive, I will try your remedy. Will you please write it out for me on this memo pad?

Most of us are hard up or very poor these days, and we are looking eagerly forward to the time when our pocketbooks will be full of crisp bills again. And when that time comes we will begin to complain because times are not better and the money is not rolling in faster. No matter how much we may succeed in accumulating, we are never satisfied.

Rastus Jackson and his wife had separated, and a neighbor was interested when she saw Rastus slip into the yard and disappear into their house. Deciding to investigate, the neighbor hurried to the back door and met Rastus emerging with a washtub tightly clasped in his arms and dragging a washboard and clothes wringer after him.

Neighbor—What you' kwing to do wid dem, niggah?

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up on your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks pink.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel “up and up.” Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. HAVE YOU HEARD

One seldom hears of a woman cashier running away with her employer's money, says an exchange. But when she does she generally takes the boss along with her.

Old Friend—I'm glad to find you as you are. Your great wealth hasn't changed you.
Candid Millionaire—Well, it has changed me in one thing. I'm now “eccentric” where I used to be impolite, and “deliberately witty” where I used to be rude.

The young man grasped the hand rail of the last car and swung himself up to the rear platform, gasping for breath. It was plain that he was quite winded. A bronzed, heavy-set, middle-aged man eyed him with disfavor. “When I was your age, young man,” he remarked, “I could sprint down the station walk and catch a train without puffing like that.”
“Yes, but I—missed this one—at the last station,” panted the new arrival.

To Start Drilling Gateway Property

Arrangements have been completed for drilling at the Gateway Patricia property adjoining Central Patricia. This was announced by the Mines Development Department of H. R. Bain and Company who are underwriting the property. Boyle Brothers, of Port Arthur, who will conduct the drilling will take the drill into the property as soon as aeroplane transportation to the field is resumed. This is expected almost immediately. Diamond drilling follows a complete land survey of the claims which had already been arranged.

Gateway Patricia, 1080 acres in area, is the property immediately adjoining Central Patricia on the west. With definite values reported by previous owners who conducted a small, exploratory drilling campaign on a few of the northern claims, additional interest attaches to the present drilling owing to the fact that about a month ago it was reported in the Northern Miner that Central Patricia, in an exploratory campaign had intersected $14 ore, 1,200 feet nearer the Gateway boundary. In addition Gateway is on the line of strike of Central Patricia's main ore bodies for a distance of one mile.

In addition to the drilling campaign a complete electrical survey of the property will be undertaken.

To finance development 700,000 shares of Gateway are being currently offered to the public. Remaining in the treasury for future development are 1,500,000 shares of half the original capital of 3,000,000 shares.

Save the Wild Flowers
Every Spring nature lovers are saddened by the wanton destruction of wild flowers that add a touch of color to the woods. The violets, Spring beauties and trilliums that once graced hill and dale in profusion are becoming scarcer from year to year. It is a pity to see these wild flowers gradually disappearing. If at all possible they should be preserved for posterity.

Probably it is too much to ask people to refrain from picking the blooms, but they should at least comply with the request not to uproot them.

New Seed Potato Certified WARBA
The new Warba potato is without a doubt, the finest origination of a century in the early potato class. It has been tried in many parts of United States and Canada and all results have shown that it is fully two weeks ahead and more productive than the well known early variety Irish-Cobbler. Its shape is roundish, skin and flesh white, eyes about the same depth as those of the Cobbler variety, but pinkish in color. It cooks well, is delicious and keeps very well. Our trial at Macdonald College last summer, has convinced us that it will soon be the leading early variety of potato for our northern climate. While our stock lasts:

Had What Can't Be Acquired

When Elie Spivak of Toronto was judging violin classes at the Stratford Musical Festival he listened to the playing of a young man from London and gave him 92 marks, which is running high, comments the Peterborough Examiner. One must indeed show a merit to go over the 90 mark at the Stratford festival. In making his comment Mr. Spivak said in part: “The boy had that amazing quality of greatness—he has a quality that cannot be acquired.”

That is interesting; a “quality that cannot be acquired.” It means that no amount of hard work which another less gifted person might put on the work would produce the quality that this contestant from London possesses. We believe Mr. Spivak would agree with the claim that a teacher could not impart that quality to a student; the teacher might instruct in methods of technique; might perfect the style, but back of it all would be that strange thing, “a quality which cannot be acquired.” That view runs at cross purposes to the claim that “genius is actually the capacity for hard work.” According to the finding of Elie Spivak, himself a musician of rare accomplishment, two people could devote the same energy and attention to the study of the violin, and one would outstrip the other because he might have that “quality which cannot be acquired.” We are inclined to believe that view is correct and can be substantiated by experience and example in many lines of effort.

Such a contest as that at Stratford gives opportunity to bring talent to the surface; it can there be submitted to those who are competent to recognize it and pass judgment upon it. To the one who has “it” in any particular line of musical effort the judge can state with a certain degree of assurance that there is a future for the competitor who has that quality or talent “which cannot be acquired.” The development of that talent will ultimately give us great musicians in our own right. And the truth is we need them.

Prairie Problems

Immigration is not a welcome word in these days of unemployment, but I believe the time is not far distant when a selective form of immigration will be both desirable and possible. I have in mind particularly those fitted and willing to engage in mixed farming on small holdings on a basis of self-sufficiency rather than for export. True, large areas in the West are not suited for mixed farming, and the local market there is definitely limited, but wheat will continue for years to be the major item of agricultural production on the Prairies. Fortunately, the world outlook for wheat is gradually brightening. Some progress is being made in regaining for Canadian wheat the goodwill of millers and the wheat trade generally in Great Britain. But present and prospective prices are such as to call for the minimum of production costs and the highest possible grades. Only in this way may our wheat farmers compete successfully in world markets. Meanwhile, Canada as a whole must seek to obtain, by trade agreements and otherwise, markets that have been lost in Great Britain, Continental Europe and the Orient. I think we have learned the lesson that our business is to sell it at world prices rather than to hold it for speculation or with a view to forcing higher prices.—John Imrie in Canadian Business (Montreal).
