Owing to Painful Rheumatism

This woman suffered from rheumatism in her back, arms and legs. For two months, she endured this painful condition, then, like many another sufferer, she decided to try Kruschen Salts. Read her letter:—"About fifteen months ago I had rheumatism in my arms, back and legs. The pains in my arms and legs after getting warm in bed were almost unbearable. It was like that for two months; and could not reach above my head. I read so much about Kruschen Salts that I thought I would try them. I am so glad to say that for more than a year I have not had the slightest return of my rheumatism."—(Mrs.) H. E.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently due to deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. Kruschen Salts assist in stimulating the internal organs to healthy, regular activity, and help them to get rid of this excess uric acid.

Cancer

Writes the New York Times:—In a precious paper long in possession of the New York Historical Society, written in the seventeenth century B.C., but being copied from a treatise on surgery of still a thousand years earlier, there is mention of a disease which is supposed by the translator to be cancer.

It had haunted the human race through five thousand years, and even now is beyond the sure control of modern science. But in spite of the fact that the death rate from cancer is "but little if at all diminishing" there have been such advances in the last 25 years in our knowledge through laboratory research and such great additions to the resources of those who diagnose and treat the disease that "larger and larger number of patients receive effective and successful treatment of cancer every year." This is due primarily to the earlier discovery of the disease by the patient and the more prompt application of treatment by surgery and by radiation.

The President of the American Society for the Control of Cancer holds it not improbable that the education of the public has been "the most vital factor." There is urgent need for the continuance of the active service of this society which has for ten years been carrying on this humanitarian work.

The layman and "especially the laywoman" must be taught to appreciate the possible "cancer significance" of certain symptoms and helped to understand that delay is fatal. A recent week was designated by Governor Lehman as one in which attention should be given to this cause. To many an individual this is of even more consequence than the election.

MINING NEWS

Morris Kirkland Gold Mines has encountered ore on each of the four new levels with 50 feet of the shaft, according to L. H. Watts, secretary-treasurer. The most interesting level reported is at 1,000 feet where the ore has been located right on the break and where values of $20.65 across 5.1 feet were encountered. On the 808 crosscut the following values have also been obtained, $28.70 across 3.8 feet; $11.55 across 4.6 feet; $9.20 across 4.6 feet, and the last face gave $20.65 across 5 ft.

Geraldton Long Lac Gold Mines, developing a group of claims adjoining the Hutchinson Lake property to the north, has appointed James Hazelton, engineer in charge of operations. Mr. Hazelton has left for the property where he will carry out a programme of systematic sampling of the main vein which has been traced and test-pitted for a distance of 600 feet. It will be recalled that the rich find on the Hutchinson Lake is reported to have been made close to the Geraldton boundary and results of Mr. Hazelton's examination should be available at an early date.

Diamond drill operations on the MyLamaque Gold Mines property in Bourlamaque Township, Quebec, are proceeding rapidly with favorable results being obtained. No. 5 drill hole, put down 200 ft. east of the No. 4 intersected 22 feet of quartz at a depth of 225 feet. V. M. Ryan, consulting engineer, reports to local interests. In the No. 4 hole 10 feet of ore was cut which returned an average value of better than $20 per ton. Core assays from the latest hole are expected to be available at an early date.

S. A. Pain, engineer in charge of operations on the Golden Gate Mining Co. property in the Western Kirkland Lake area, reports that the 302 crosscut on the 350-ft. level has intersected a third quartz vein, and gives the company three quartz veins of 8, 5 and 4 ft. widths in this crosscut. The section indicated by diamond drilling is expected to be encountered in the crosscut by the end of the week. The first vein in the drill hole southeast from the east end of the 350-ft. level which gave a sludge assay of $7 over a 10 ft. width is being checked by core assays. This would line up with the first vein in the 302 crosscut, Mr. Pain reports.

Que-On Mines has placed the sum of $80,000 in the treasury of Dorval Siscoe Gold Mines for development since entering into an arrangement with the latter company last July. Another payment, which will bring the total invested by Que-On to $100,000, is due on November 15th. Provided all the options are fully exercised Que-On will have acquired a 60 per cent. control of Dorval Siscoe. A three-compartment is planned for the No. 6 shaft to explore the contact zone at depth. Encouraging assays have been obtained from drilling on No. 6 and 7 islands. Three diamond drills are engaged in the present work.

Leitch Gold Mines is officially reported to have encountered a narrow vein, one ft. wide, at a depth of 450 feet in the shaft, which is being deepened to 550 feet to allow for the opening up of two new levels. Karl Springer, president, in reporting the find, stated that advice from the property claimed the vein to be showing visible gold. This may possibly be the downward extension of No. 1 or 2 vein systems.

Net earnings of International Nickel Company of Canada for the quarter ended September 30th last established a new high record for the company, being $8,672,106, equal to 62c a share. For the first nine months of 1936 net profits totalled $27,029,080 as compared with $18,080,827 for the similar period of 1935, or $1.75 per share as against $1.14 a year ago. ## Winning Teams Will Appear At The Winter Fair

Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs From Nine Provinces Will Compete

Youth in Agriculture will be splendidly represented this year at the 1936 Royal Agricultural Winter Fair, Toronto, when 31 teams with two members each of the Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs of Canada, from each of the nine provinces will be there to compete in the national contests in projects dealing with live stock, poultry, and field crops. The members of these teams are the winners in the provincial contests.

The teams are made up of 56 boys and six girls. The girls are: Jean Brown, 20, of Heffley Creek, Kamloops, B.C. (beef cattle); Ethel Ferguson and Lillian Ferguson, 18, twins, of Conjugate Creek, Alberta, (swine); Marguerite Smith, 18, of Arborg, Manitoba, and Alice Johnson, 18, Winnipeg Beach, Manitoba, (poultry); Mary Coburn, 17, Mouth of Keswick, near Fredericton, N.B., (poultry).

Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs have in recent years grown into one of the largest and most constructive of the national organizations. In 1931 there were 1,215 clubs with a total membership of 21,142. Now there are 2,098 clubs and 34,457 members.

The Open Shoe

By A. Ringer

Ever since a Greek slave 2,000 years ago tried to imitate a discus thrower with a horseshoe, during the games going on, horseshoe pitching has been in existence. As is the case in all past times, it has had its ups and downs, but with the introduction of the modern pitching shoes and standardizing of the rules, the game is enjoying a heyday.

Dominion Championships at the Royal Winter Fair have always held greatest interest to the horseshoe pitcher. This year, Senior B. players start the show on Nov. 23rd and 24th, at 7 p.m. This is a special event instituted for the benefit of organized players considered not yet ready for championship play. Special rulings provided by the Dominion of Canada Horseshoe Pitchers' Association govern this group. All must be registered members and a record of their games must be recorded. On Nov. 25th and 26th Senior A. players will hold sway in their usual Dominion Championship events. In all events will be round robin play with one event being completed each evening. On Nov. 24th and 25th doubles will be played in which players will draw partners. These facts and a reduced entry fee should make this year's events one happy gathering.

Most prominent in any local advances has been the re-organization of the Toronto and district branch, which is composed of every known properly constituted club of over 25 members. This group has been particularly successful in conducting 2 Leagues which provided the players with much keen competition, and amusement. Dave Davidson's Runnymede Club team was the Senior B. winner, while Beaches, Riverdale and Runnymede are still fighting it out for tops in Senior A.

It has been the fortune of the writer to have been directly in touch with all the recent developments in the organizing of the game, and will be glad to answer any questions through this column.

show substantial improvement, with current assets at Sept. 30, reported at $72,598,637 including $43,537,738 in cash and government securities. These figures compare with current assets of $60,109,936, including $32,720,024 in cash and government securities, as of December 31, 1935.

Production of Dome Mines for a October totalled $685,373, a new monthly record, from the treatment of 48,000 tons of ore, and compares with recovery of $647,175 in September when 45,800 tons were treated. For the 10 months of the current year the company treated 463,100 tons of ore with production valued at $5,977,462, equivalent to recovery of $12.91 per ton.

C. D.—But my name isn't Jones, sir.

A. B.—What, is your name changed, too?

Sometimes we wonder why people have to have a daylight saving plan with clocks turned forward in order to get up in the morning. Wouldn't it be less confusing as to time, the nation over, if people would get up when daylight comes?

A married man buttonholed another and told him a terrible scandal.

Harry—Don't let this go any further, George.

George—No, certainly not. But how did you happen to hear it?

Harry—Oh, from the wife, of course. She's just like all women—can't keep a secret.

Well, you weren't fired, were you? No, but neither was the audience.

Some persons pursue ideals all their lives without catching up with them.

MY! MY! WHAT A PENALTY I lived a peaceful sort of life; oh, I was gay and free—

Until the day you came along and changed the world for me.

Now days are filled with thoughts of you; I dream of you at night.

And those I liked, before you came, inspire disgust at sight.

To steal one's heart in such a way is surely an offense.

A criminal! That's what you are, and I'll seek recompense.

I'll take my case to some kind judge and ask for this decree:

The photographer was taking a picture of a father and his college boy son. The photographer suggested that the boy stand with his hand on his father's shoulder. "More appropriate," suggested the father, "if he stood with his hand in my pocket."

The agent to disappointed former client—Well, I sold you the business as a gold concern. What's the grumble—it's gone, ain't it?

She—What makes the leaves turn red in the fall?

He—They are blushing to think how green they have been all summer.

The man who says he welcomes constructive criticism is usually looking for somebody to agree with him.

Charles—That fellow must live in a very small apartment.

Frank—How can you tell?

Charles—Why, haven't you noticed that his dog wags his tail up and down, instead of sideways?

Paul—They're looking for a balloon dancer for a new Broadway show.

Amos—Then maybe you can hire my wife.

Paul—Oh, is she a dancer?

Amos—No, but she's chapered like a balloon.

Some people are so tender-hearted they can't hurt any living creature except relatives.

Joe—I hear that Spillman has gone to Alaska to settle.

Jack—No; the truth of the matter is that he has gone there to keep from settling.

Treasure Hunt

The British frigate, Hussar, which sank in Long Island Sound, New York in 1780 with $5,000,000 worth of gold and silver aboard, has just been located. Treasure hunters have spent years searching for her.

She was located by Mr. Simon Lake, an American salvage expert, who is the inventor of a special underwater device. By means of this he was able to obtain a complete outline of the ship, and this agrees with official records.

These records also contain the information that ten chests of silver specie and four chests of gold were put aboard her before she sailed. It is these that the treasure-hunters hope to recover.

Britons are Russia's best customers. During the first half of this year they bought Soviet goods worth $25,000,000; this is nearly twice as much as was bought by the United States of America.

The new pink chrysanthemum with a touch of gold on its petals has been produced, and is greatly admired. The flower has not yet been christened. "Sunset" has been suggested as an appropriate name.

Vulgarity In Journalism

The New Republic of New York writes—Does any reader of the New Republic know or one American newspaper that has published, and intends to publish, nothing about Mrs. Ernest Simpson, her divorce and her friendship for King Edward? If so, we should like to subscribe. (It will probably turn out to be the Christian Science Monitor, which we are already receiving). The handling of this story in the American press in recent weeks is another case of that scandalousness, that unholiness over discussions of the private life of prominent persons, that causes college professors of sociology to wag their gray beards sadly about the vulgarity and rapidity of our journalism.

Four Rules For Staying Happy

Watch For Fatigue Symptoms Is Advice of Springfield Preacher

Four basic rules for keeping ourselves happy were given recently by the Rev. Dr. James Gordon Gilkey, of Springfield, Mass.

"There comes to us all unhappy days when we want nothing so much as to get away," he said. "Suppose you are one of thousands of restless, dissatisfied, unhappy people.

"Study yourself until you know your own symptoms of fatigue. Most moods of restlessness are by-products of fatigue and are relatively unimportant.

"If a man knows what his symptoms of fatigue are, he will be able to recognize the advent of exhaustion of its accompanying mood of restlessness. Then he will know when to stop taking seriously the things he finds himself saying to himself."

Fatigue Symptoms. As examples of fatigue symptoms, Dr. Gilkey cited a sudden impulse to be irritable, inability to make decisions and an impulse to imagine quarrels.

"Remind yourself continually that you know a little, a very little, about the alternate career of which you dream so enviously," he continued. "You picture that alternative career as attractive, easy and inevitably successful and you tell yourself that if you were following it you would be infinitely happier than you are today.

"But all this, of course, is sheer guess work. You and I know and can know only very little when we look at it from the outside. Only as we make our way inside can we discover what its real problems and difficulties are.

Cheerfulness. "Accept cheerfully and without protest the characteristic limitations of your own world, by which I mean the particular set of disappointments and handicaps which is inevitably and indissolubly connected with your career, your community, your home.

"The final rule is undoubtedly the most important of all. If you want to find happiness where you are, picture your career in high terms rather than low ones. Picture it in the highest terms you can find. Picture it as your way of helping a needy world. Picture it as God's will for your life."

From 46,000 Feet Up

Squadron Leader F. R. D. Swain, of the R.A.F., recently reached the world record altitude of 49,967 feet.

In the course of an interview Squadron Leader Swain said: "At about 46,000 feet I found on looking down that the light was almost dazzling. I had made several flights previously, however, and knew that the light was going to be very bright, so that I had asked that the top of the main plane and fuselage should be painted dull black to minimize the glare.

"On looking up at the sky I found it was a very deep blue—almost black. And the reason was that there are no molecules of dust or moisture to split up the days of light and there are no clouds above about 35,000 feet. Below I could see the whole of the English coastline from Margate to Land's End and north almost as far as the Wash. London looked like a little toy town, and the Thames and other rivers were like pieces of narrow ribbons.

"Farther south I could see the North of France, and to the southwest I could see the Channel Islands looking like small stones in a shallow river-bed. I must confess that at that moment I felt very small and lonely. I had the impression that England was a very minute country."

—Manchester Guardian.

Portia Purges Poker

Writes the Toronto Globe: Scene 1—A New York court room. Characters: Woman Magistrate. Police raiding squad. Eleven women accused of gambling with the cards and the chips, commonly known as playing poker for money. Certain rises on trial of the accused. Police testify to breaking up of game. They had been ungalant, but evidently inspired by that old line in school copy-books which claimed it a good thing to hew to the line and let the chips fall where they may. So the chips flew everywhere; and again without gallantry, inspired only by a sense of duty, the police "escorted" their quarry to the court.

Scene 2—Portia on the bench this time. Line-up of the fair though slightly dishevelled poker players. Evidence all taken. Quoth Portia: "Since when is it a crime to play poker? I don't know the game but I do know that it is no crime to play it. About time the police stopped this lawless law enforcement." Case dismissed. Curtain.

Epilogue—Imperial precedent established. In the land of the free and the home of the taint has been removed from the national game. Fair hands may do whatever they can with the cards and may reach daintily for the chips; settling up in cash before going home to explain losses or boast of winnings. Woman, in her consistent invasion of man's ancient preserves, has gained another victory. She may play poker for money, and without police interference. More emancipation. "Since when is it a crime to play poker?" well, it isn't a crime now anyway, and this by court decree—in New York.

Afraid of the Dark

By AUDREY C. HAYDEN

As far back as I can remember I never was afraid of the dark. When I became a mother, I believed that there was no reason why any child should be afraid, and that if fear were never suggested in connection with darkness, it wouldn't occur to the child to be afraid. Darkness is a natural phenomenon, I reasoned, and one of which babies are not afraid.

Applying this theory, all went well with my own little girl, until something unfortunate happened. Either someone complimented my little three-year-old on her bravery, shown in going up to bed alone, or someone told an alarming story, or someone—well, no matter, I don't know how it happened. This I do know: Jane began to say she was afraid of the dark—that frogs would get her. She would even refuse to go to the bathroom alone with only the hall light burning.

Now I really believe that most of the cases of fear of the dark on the part of children have no deep-rooted reason. When there is such reason, if it can be found, of course very careful consideration should be given to reconditioning. But most children fear the dark because they have somehow imbibed the idea that it is rather expected of them—that if they are not afraid they are very brave, but if they are afraid it is nothing to be wondered at. The child having acquired the fear, there are two popular methods for exorcising it. One is to attempt to get back to the original cause and explain that away; the second to overcome it by setting up artificial bravery.

I tried to reason with Jane, and showed her pictures of frogs to let her see how small they are, and also made a lot of "brave talk" about "a great big girl like you." But my efforts had no effect. Jane just cried and clung to my dress, and pulled me along with her to bed or the bathroom. She wasn't brave and wasn't going to be talked into it. It seemed best to accede quietly. I took her to the bathroom and to bed for two or three weeks, and I did it as a matter of course. I made it a point, also, to walk from room to room without a light as soon as she was in bed. After going downstairs I would come up on an imaginary errand, and walk about again in the darkness. On several occasions, a little before bedtime, we went down cellar in the dark, but always without any mention of its being dark.

When she spoke of frogs I said yes, I could see them too;—that it was fun to be able to imagine things, wasn't it? And the best part was that since they weren't real, you could stop imagining them whenever you wanted to. Once we got down and hopped around the room, playing we were frogs ourselves. I got some polliwogs for the fish bowl, and I bought a celluloid frog—but we were very matter-of-fact about it and frogs and darkness and fear were never connected in our conversation.

Then one day I felt very ill and spent the day lying on the couch. When night came and Jane wanted to go to the bathroom, I called her over and said: "Now, Jane, Mother is sick, so you will have to go alone." And she said, "Yes." "It will be dark in there, do you understand? And I cannot come in if you call me to turn on the light," I explained. She thought a minute, and then said: "All right." When bedtime came, I undressed her and sent her up to bed alone, and then casually sent another member of the family up on an errand. Jane had the idea, though, that I was sending her alone to bed, and that the company and the light were merely incidental.

The next night I went to the bathroom, ostensibly to get some tissue, making it appear accidental that I went when Jane was there. Then I sent her off to bed alone, casually. The next night I sent her to the bathroom and to bed in the dark without comment, and it has been a regular occurrence ever since. "Did we get at the root of the trouble? That's hard to say since I never found out the beginning of the fear, but—we made the dark into a very ordinary, matter-of-fact condition."
