A BLIGHT IN BARLEY

There is anxiety in a number of farm homes in the Alliston district, says the Herald of that town, because of a blight that has appeared in several stands of barley. The leaves of the shoots are turning white and the plant dies. In practically every instance the head has appeared in the plants attacked. Simcoe Agricultural Representative has rushed samples of the grain and soil in which it is grown to the Guelph College for analysis. The blight is quite general in South Simcoe.
In some fields where this blight has appeared there is a well defined line between the affected and unaffected areas which makes the mystery of the trouble more difficult to determine. It may be that the rains of the spring which washed the soil off some of the areas and placed it on others have caused a release of plant foods in some places and made these minerals deficient in others.
Were a whiteness of the leaf to appear on an apple tree or even in wheat the condition would be taken to indicate a deficiency in potash in the soil and if it is found that this is the cause of the barley blight the cause may be ascribed to the heavy rains and shifting of soil in the spring.
