Movie Preview (By 'C.H.N.)

Playing at the Stanley this weekend, "The Kid Comes Back," with Wayne Morris. Remember the boy who hit the royal road to stardom in those two swell pictures "Kid Galahad," and "Submarine D-I." Wayne plays the lead in this prizefight yarn, which although a bit thin as compared with the superb Kid Galahad, has a competent supporting cast in June Travis. Barton MacLane and Kickie Jones. On the same program, "Little Red Walking Hood," in colour. ** ** ** **

Next mid-week, "Easy Living." a rip-roarious comedy drama, perhaps a little too much so for those who take their pictures seriously. The storya poor stenographer (Jean Arthur), who while riding on a bus, is struck by a sable coat, thrown from the window by a stock broker (Edward Arnold), who incidently has quarreled with his wife. When Jean returns the coat, he insists on her keeping it. News spreads that she is his mistress. Meanwhile she falls in love with her benefactor's son, a waiter in a luncheonette. Comedy is a little overdone, but good entertainment value.

"Snow White and-the Seven Dwarfs," the one big picture Toronto has to offer at the present time is certainly proving all that the critics said about it. It has a guaranteed booking of a month at the Uptown. Walt Disney who has switched his stand from M.G.M. to R.K.O. has made this $1,700,000 effort of his, a colossal success. Taking a story with so flimpsy a structure as a Grimm's fairy tale, he has made his characters live in a way never thought possible before. Four A-1 song hits give the picture a good
