Plenty to Give

There is much in this world that money can't buy. The flowers in spring-time, the blue in the sky. The beauty of Nature in the world where we live. And there's pleasure in knowing there's plenty to give.

We can give of our time to a sick friend's dark hour. We can carry, some roses, or other bright flower.

Let us bring our bright blossoms to folk while they live. And rejoice in the fact that there's plenty to give.

There's plenty to give as we journey along. The courage of laughter, the lift of a song.

They may count us as poor on the street where we live. Of life's fairest treasures there's plenty to give.

There's plenty to give in a life that's worth while. A kind spoken word, a bright cheery smile;

The Master of men was not rich in earth's pelf. But He gave best of all when He gave us Himself.

Starting at 8.15 p.m. the girls and boys are to have separate meetings until 9.30 p.m. After 10, then intermission they will come together for a joint program until 10.30 p.m. This program can be made up of any form of entertainment the committee desire. A new committee consisting of three boys and three girls are to be put in each month. We hope in this way to bring every person into helping with the meeting and see how you like this new idea.
