He is a brother of Mrs. Lumsden Cummings, 4 De Vere Gardens, Borns at Victoria Square, son of Mrs. Margaret McCague, now of Alliston, and the late George McCague, the 25-year-old flyer attended North Toronto Collegiate prior to entering the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. AUTHOR OF "ANNE OF GREEN GABLES" DEAD that freshness and simplicity of style characteristic of her writings. Many honors came to Mrs. Macdonald. She was made an officer of the Order of the British Empire and became a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts.

Born in Clifton, Prince Edward Island, Nov. 20, 1874, she was the only daughter of Clara Woolner Macneill and Hugh John Montgomery, who settled in the Island province to farm. Her mother died about a year after her birth and she was brought up at Cavendish by her grandparents. At the age of 12 she won a story-writing contest sponsored by a Montreal newspaper.

Her father married again and she returned to the Maritime, attending Dalhousie University there. Later she taught school at Biddleford and Ellerslie in Prince Edward Island.

Wrote Poetry, Too

At the age of 20 she went to Cavendish to live with her grandmother and there she met Rev. Ewan Macdonald, Presbyterian minister. They were married after the death of her grandmother and moved to Leaskdale, Ontario, where her husband was minister of the Presbyterian Church.

The busy life of a minister's wife did not stop her writing. She published a wide array of books and in 1917 a book of poems, entitled "The Watchman." She also wrote many magazine stories.

Surviving are her husband and two sons, Chester, practising law at Aurora; and Stuart, an interne at St. Michael's Hospital. Burial took place in her native Prince Edward Island.

The old farm at Cavendish is now a part of the National Park of Prince Edward Island and spots made famous in her writings have been preserved as they were described in her books.
