BACK TORTURED SEAMEN

(Continued from front page) land. That's rationing. You put up a sail to catch the rain. You find you can't drink because of the salt in the sail. You scour the sail for hours to get the salt out of it, and it has stopped raining.

"That 15-year-old boy went through that unmerciful shelling. He baled water all night. He never complained. In the morning we found that he was wounded, the back of his heel off. For four days and four nights he never complained. He died on the fifth day. He died thirsty."

"That boy could have told the 'No beer, no bonds' people about rationing."

Mr. Laskier's third ship was shelled by the Von Scheer one thousand miles from land. "They killed my mate, a lad I grew up with in Liverpool. They blew off my leg. I was unconscious on a raft. Eighty of us took that ship out. Sixteen of us, wounded, got on that raft. Six were killed by machine-gun bullets. Two more died. Eight of us were picked up. One of the eight went mad. Six of us got better and went back to sea. Five of us are still alive.

There are 55,000 men gone. The list of lost ships is as high as this room."

The merchant ships could not reach Britain or Russia without corvettes, he said, and corvettes cost money.

"Some say that the war will end in six months. The Germans are not fools. They know they have machine-gunned our lifeboats. They know what they did to Warsaw, Russia and Poland and Czechoslovakia have no monopoly on hatred. There are a whole gang of us determined, no matter what those countries do, that we are going into Germany.

"Don't forget that the man who says 'No beer, no bonds,' the man who refuses to buy bonds, will be the little fellow who will say after the war, 'You can't punish an entire nation.' You remember the breed of them in the last war."
