Deer Demolishes Every Green Leaf in Garden

Deer are well named because most everybody loves them when they are in their proper element, and we are inclined to take their part and want them protected even when they wander to the outskirts of towns and villages. However, nobody wants a deer in his garden, and when one does land up in that cultivated acreage it is usually too bad for the garden. Such an experience came to Russel Nendick, old Stouffville boy, living at Leaskdale in Scott township. The other morning he arose to find every leaf in the garden nipped off, and any that were overlooked were tramped into the mud.

Imprints of deer hoofs left little doubt about who to place the blame on. Deer were reported in the neighborhood sometime ago, but they were not seen by Mr. Nendick.

Why they should have treated his garden lot as though it were a paddock is hard to understand since it was just as easy to leave after eating their fill of lettuce, beets, carrots. Onions and potatoes were trampled badly, probably in protest for not having a likeable flavor.

If Russel Nendick could prove his claim before the Dept. of Game and Fisheries he might be reimbursed for his loss, since deer are protected and are the property of the government. Of course, dollars and cents would never replace a good garden at this stage of the season.
