

Brougham Take Early Lead in Defeating Port

Brougham "Bears" defeated Port Perry Intermediates 7-1 in a scheduled South Ontario Hockey league game on Friday night. It was a rough and tumble game with four penalties being handed out to Brougham while the local lads had six "all minors."

Brougham scored three goals in quick succession in the first ten minutes of the game, Redshaw, Reesor and Simpson scoring. To end the scoring in the first period Todd beat Pargeter on a corner shot to make it 4-0. The local lads outscored the visitors 2-1 in the second period; Edgar and Howey scoring for Port Perry while Reesor picked up his second goal of the game.

Port came out full of fight in the third period and scored, Painter banging a goal in at the two minute mark. With Pargeter taking a rest in the penalty box, Brougham banged in two quick goals at the half way mark to end their scoring. With only two minutes remaining in the period, Bradbury made solo dash from his own goal and backhanded the final goal past Boadway.

DeRusha, Simpson and Spencely were best for the visitors, each scoring once and playing an all round good game.

Pargeter in goal for the local team came up with another outstanding game, Howey, Painter, Hockberg and Bradbury also playing well.

Brougham—Goal, Boadway; def., Harper, Spencely; forwards, DeRusha, Redshaw, Simpson; alternates, J. Todd, G. Todd, Clark, Paisley, Reesor, Wilson, Disney. Port Perry—Goal, Pargeter; def., Edgar, Honey; forwards, Painter, Bradbury, Hockberg; alternates, Howey, Williams, Taylor, Mark, Brown, Jeffrey.

It is most important for the man-in-the-street across Canada to learn that this veteran observer must report at this time that it is clear along Parliament Hill that there are many efforts to guess the supposed probability or possibility of the coming political developments in Ottawa, including the forthcoming events that may be aftermaths of the North Grey by-election and the coming general election. It is said in well-informed quarters along Parliament Hill that at best these opinions or conjectures are usually based on slight or presumptive evidence and their proponents are generally moving in circles. This means that these are nothing more than idle political speculations. In reality, notwithstanding all propoganda or publicity to the contrary, yet the political situation in Ottawa at this moment is not inexplicable because it can be emphasized in the strongest possible terms that the course of conduct of the Federal Government is most likely to be governed by the developments on the war fronts just as much, if not more so, than by the political factors on the home front. Even with the facilities for knowing what is happening in the war to a far better extent than the man-in-the-street still the top men along Parliament Hill have been considerably surprised at the rapid pace of the latest developments on the war fronts. This seems apparent to this veteran observer so that it is wise on the part of the man-in-the-street to recognize that the war events rather than the home front political occurrences will determine the course of action of the Federal Government in the coming weeks, with the added hint that any emergency caused by the war may force the hand of political leaders to do what the circumstances will dictate, even in regard to any sudden calling of a session, if conditions should compel such an emergency action. The war, and war alone, will decide what will happen in this nation's capital.

Delegations from the National Religious Advisory Council and the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada have held a private conference in Ottawa with the Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and it has been reported along Parliament Hill that they have protested strongly against any further curtailment of Sunday religious broadcasting over both the C.B.C. and privately owned radio stations across this country.

The Government in Ottawa will take part in the establishment and operations of a Commonwealth Air Transport Council. This has been announced in the capital where it was also disclosed that the functions of this Council will be to keep a watchful eye on the development of Commonwealth civil air communications, to provide a medium for exchange of views as well as information on such matters, and to consider as well as to advise on such civil aviation affairs as any nation of the Commonwealth may desire to refer to the Council. The first meeting of this Council will be held in London and the wartime membership will include the United Kingdom, Canada, New Zealand, Australia, South Africa, India, Southern Rhodesia, Newfoundland, and the Colonial Empire.

Before the year 1945 will end, it is expected that the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will spend about $69,300,000 in Canada and this will be in addition to more than $30,000,000 already spent in this country by this body for Canadian supplies to be shipped abroad under the UNRRA. This has been revealed in Ottawa.

Since there are a great many Canadian businessmen, farmers and others who have been seeking new trucks in a bad way, it should be most interesting for them to be informed now that Canada's automobile plants will send 4,200 trucks to Australia this year for essential civilian use there, with the first shipments said to be made probably within the next couple of months or earlier.

Mr. Vernon McGee, Deputy Director of the War Manpower Commission and other leading officers of this official organization of the United States Government, have come to Ottawa in order to study Canada's Selective Service system and to report their findings to Washington. Miss Olive Waters, who was Col. Ralston's secretary and "right hand man" when he was Minister of Finance and Defence Minister, has been given the post of administrative assistant in the Department of Health and National Welfare in Ottawa. There is a story in the capital that an "RCAP" truck is to be used to transport the personal effects of Dr. Hugh Kenleyside, Canada's Ambassador to Mexico, from Ottawa to Mexico City because this would provide the

ACCORDING TO PLAN

By Lewis Milligan
"Everything is going according to plan" was the regular conclusion announcements from German headquarters in the early days of the war, and particularly in later official despatches during the almost unimpeded drive into Russia. Even when everything did not go as well as anticipated, a halt or a retreat was occasionally said to be "according to plan." But when the drive went into reverse and the German armies, like those of Napoleon, were trying to extricate themselves from Russian pincers and get back home, those words, "according to plan," would sometimes appear in Nazi reports for the solace of the disappointed German people. They were not told, of course, that the backward movement was according to the Russian plan. They probably guessed as much, but those words, "according to plan," were like an old refrain which brought back memories of happy, far off things and victories long ago.

And now no more. Nothing is going according to the plan of the Nazi war lords, and it is extremely doubtful if they now have any plan, except it be for escape. Hitler himself has disappeared—vanished, and it has been suggested that his vanishment is according to a plan devised by Dr. Goebbels for an underground movement. In a recent radio address the wily doctor told the German people that Hitler must henceforth be regarded as a spiritual being and worshipped as a sort of mythical Teuton god. He is to become a legend like King Arthur, or perhaps more like Barbarossa, who is supposed to be sleeping in a cave and will one day wake up and return to the world for final conquest.

But history reveals that nothing has ever gone strictly according to plan in human affairs, and least of all according to elaborately devised plans for military and political conquest. Great leaders like Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, Mahomet and Napoleon have planned to conquer the world by force, and while they marched triumphant for a time, they eventually came to the end of their tether. They were themselves conquered by the laws of time and change, and most of all by human nature and the rising generations which refused to be regimented according to the plans of a dictator. When Oliver Cromwell assumed the role of a dictator, even though his plans for a "Commonwealth of Saints" were devised for the good of the common people, human nature asserted itself and England preferred freedom to the straight jacket of a dictator.

The world of today is rife with plans for the postwar world, and all of the plans call for force in one form or another for their fulfillment. We speak of the "Three Great World Powers," and we are looking forward to this alliance being able by military and economic planning to preserve peace among the nations, or at least to prevent another world war. There are good grounds for faith and hope in this allied planning. They are not plans for conquest, unless it be to conquer and subdue the evil spirit of selfish and militant racialism.

Power in itself is not an evil thing; it is only when it gets into the hands of the dictator that it becomes evil and degenerates into force. The mistake of Hitler and his Nazi gangsters was that they believed they could achieve world power by brute force. Their New World Order was to be established and maintained by force, and the Allied Nations must beware lest they make the same mistake in their plans for the postwar world. The possession of power is a stewardship, and it may be a power for righteousness and peace; but wherever it has been misused as dictatorial force, whether in national, political, social or in domestic affairs, its projects have never gone "according to plan."

W.P.T.B. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q.—I bought a small second hand heater for $10 which I now find out is a third hand stove. Now I find that I can buy a more up-to-date stove for 35c more. Is there a price ceiling on used stoves?

A.—Yes, there is a price ceiling on used stoves. If you buy a used coal or wood stove of the under $40 variety from a dealer, his ceiling price is 90% of the original new price. If you buy the same kind of a used stove from a private person, that is a stove which has been used over six months, the maximum price would be the same price as was charged for a similar new stove by stores in the same locality. If you still think you were overcharged, please send us the trade name of the stove, the model, dealer's address, and we will have the matter checked by the Used Goods administration.

Q.—Our owner landlord has just given us six months' notice to vacate by mail. The notice was written on a piece of stationery. His reason is that he wants to repair the house for sale. Can he put us out for that reason as he doesn't want to live here himself?

A.—No, a tenant can't be given notice for that reason. If your landlord wants to renovate the premises, regardless of what he wishes to make of them, he must first apply to the rental administration for a permit to give the tenant three months' notice to vacate. However, the landlord must have a permit before giving you notice and the notice must be on a form supplied by the W.P.T.B.

Q.—I paid 15c for a tin of spaghetti last week which I think is too much as I can buy it for 10½c at other places. Is there a ceiling price on such items of canned food?

A.—Yes, the price of such items is controlled by the Board. It is difficult to say how much you should have been charged as there are many different brands and sizes of canned spaghetti. However 15c does seem high.

Q.—I had a fur coat made over from a size 40 to a size 16 and was charged $40. Since then I have been told I could have had it done for $20. Was I charged too much?

A.—The furrier should not have charged more for his work than he charged for the same job during the basic period, Sept. 15 to Oct. 11, 1941. Prices for such work vary greatly and always have. The price would, of course, depend on the type of workmanship, etc.

Q.—Is there a ceiling price on the storage of furniture?

A.—This, again, is a price which is governed by the amount charged by the same firm for the same amount of space during the basic period. The firm would not be allowed to increase their rates above those charged at that time without W.P.T.B. approval.
