

W.P.T.B. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q.—Are stores allowed to increase the price of sugar because it is scarce at the present time? I recently paid 9c lb. and think this is too high.

A.—No, stores certainly are not allowed to increase the price of sugar, while the world supply of sugar is short there is enough in Canada to meet the ration coupons when they become valid. The price of sugar is governed by the price charged by each individual store during the basic period, Sept. 15 to Oct. 11, 1941. If you think any particular store is charging more now than they did during that period—or if they have recently raised the price—let us know and we will investigate at once.

Q.—I had a suit cleaned and when it was returned to me it was just as dirty as when I sent it. Is there any way I can force this firm to refund my money?

A.—This is not a matter over which the Prices Board has any jurisdiction—the price of such work is controlled but it is a matter of personal arrangement between you and the cleaning establishment as to whether the job is done satisfactorily or not.

Q.—I bought a seersucker house-coat in our town for $7.50 and think I was charged too much. I am enclosing the price tags and WPTB stamp. Will you please check it?

A.—Thanks so much for remembering to send the WPTB license number and price tags. We have referred your complaint to the investigation department of the Board. They will be in touch with you direct.

Q.—I took my little boy's bike in to be fixed. It needed the handle bar tightened, the seat screwed up and four or five new spokes in the wheels. I was charged $9.75 for this which seems a lot of money for what was done. What do you think?

A.—It is difficult to tell exactly what the price should have been without the number of hours for labor. You can appreciate that the WPTB investigator can't properly investigate a complaint unless he has the evidence—which is the bill for the transaction. Please send us the account and if you have destroyed it, ask the repair shop to make you out another from their books.

Then we'll have a WPTB investigator look into the matter promptly.

WHAT HUNGER IS IN EUROPE

There has been so much bloodshed and so much horror during the past few years that at times the ties of the brotherhood of man have worn pretty thin.

Canada, who has been playing a part in the war of which we can all be proud, is only concerned with the great humane task of helping to relieve suffering. One of the agencies devoted to this end is UNRRA. We have been reading the monthly review of the activities of UNRRA, and some of the stories tug at your heart strings. Here's one. In Yugoslavia the people have been living with the ever-present spectre of hunger. You are used, no doubt, to seeing a few grains of wheat lying about. A few grains out of hundreds of bushels are nothing worth bothering about, so you think. But when UNRRA is delivering supplies of wheat to Yugoslavia women eagerly sweep up the grain as they escape from the sacks.

In one district of Yugoslavia the distribution of canned meat and vegetables allowed each person is slightly more than one can. Some cans, therefore, had to be opened and their contents portioned out so that each person could have his or her exact allowance. If the scales wavered slightly over the mark, the weighing official took a spoon and removed one bean so that the scales showed the right amount to be given.

And then some of us in Canada are perhaps inclined to feel that there is inconvenience in having two meatless days a week. If we get a mental picture of men and women sweeping up a few grains of wheat and hovering anxiously over an official as he removes one bean so that the scales will register the exact amount, perhaps we won't be inclined to grumble.

Ready for occupancy in this completely factory-built home in Longueuil, Que. It's a dream cottage which can be ordered from a catalogue and delivered from an assembly-line factory ready to be quickly assembled and occupied quickly. It's sturdy, Mrs. Canada won't have to worry about her little white house falling into disrepair for the manufacturers claim it will last a lifetime. Nor will she be too concerned about summer's heat or winter's cold. Aluminum siding, the manufacturers say, is cooler in summer and warmer in winter than wood siding. Decoration is something she won't have to worry about. Before it leaves the factory the house is painted on the outside, papered on the inside and the floors are covered with inlaid linoleum throughout.

already supplying Britain with about 85 per cent. of her imported bacon and she has shipped this year about 80,000,000 pounds of beer and will send another 80,000,000 pounds before the end of 1945. All in all, the outlook in Ottawa indicates that the Canadian farmer's products will find a profitable all year market for Canadian beef, bacon, etc., in the United Kingdom for the next few years at least, if not for another generation or more.

With the removal of wartime restrictions on alcoholic beverages, the authorities in Ottawa are most interested in observing what the provincial authorities will do to increase the supplies for the consumers of such beverages since it is no secret that the Federal Government had endured considerable "irritation" even in politics, from the anger of many people who believed that they were unable to get their supplies of alcoholic beverages due to the central authorities' restrictive measures of wartime.

Wedding in Native Polish Custom

Green River holds the record for high jinks and capers which were cut on the pattern of an European festival Saturday to Monday of this week.

The young lady formerly known as Miss Valeria Zubrzycski to her friends, and her newly wedded husband Mr. Michael Janiszewski were the principals of the fete and the festivities were held in the big barn on the farm of the bride's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Zubrzyski.

Valerie and Michael were married in the Polish Catholic church at Gillespie and Davenport in Toronto to Val's own cousin the Reverend Father Kwikoski, a very modern ceremony in an ancient setting. The bride, a very pretty girl in ordinary dress, was more than breathtaking in her white satin gown and long lace veil. Her maid of honor and three bridesmaids in pink satin and lace, with the groom's four attendants in formal masculine attire, a tiny flower girl and boy completed the setting. The church was decorated with Gladioli and fern, and the seats were well filled with friends. After the ceremony the bridal party returned to Green River.

It is understandable how Europe has turned out so many artists and Canada might well learn from these people how to cast dull care aside and brighten up the travel through this oftentimes dull life. The Polish music is something out of this world! A person would have to have both feet in the grave in order not to feel the urge to get up and polish off the dance floor in fine style. Val's mother being Polish, the music was of that country. It is understandable how Poland has stood and will stand through the centuries regardless of what time has dashed out to her. If Canada can evolve National music to accentuate the heart beat as does this of Poland, her future as a Nation is assured.

The big barn had been cleared of every shred of hay, kernel of grain or vestige of dust. The plank floor was scrubbed clean, flowers and leafy branches lined the walls and brought the fragrance of the woods indoors. The tables were horse shoe fashion and the centre of the barn became a dance floor.

The food was prepared by another type of artist since its taste was a subtle blend of the most delectable flavors which brought back keen memories of European travels.

A second supper was served at eleven when the bride cut the cake and friends gathered round to present tokens of a substantial form and be rewarded by a kiss from the bride and groom. The orchestra again took over and dancing was resumed.

The hum of threshing machine on our line can be clearly heard. Two machines are at present busy rolling the golden sheaves out, and a good yield of grain is reported. Morgan Degeer is doing some good work with his new outfit.
