A brass curbcock on the water mains in front of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Thomas, caused considerable loss of water on Sunday. Workmen got busy first thing Monday and made repairs but this could only be accomplished by shutting off the water supply for a couple of hours. Coming as it did on Monday, it was not appreciated by the householders. However, it was one of those unfortunate breaks that always happens at an unfortunate time. This same curbcock broke last winter and proved a difficult repair to make in the extreme cold.

Just four appeals were heard a week ago against Stouffville's 1948 assessment roll. The largest claim was from Harvey Moyer on Lloyd Ave. who asked a reduction of $500. The other three who appealed were eastend residents, Cecil Davis, Geo. Harmon, Miss E. Harding, and council promised to look over their properties personally before making a decision. It was pointed out that equality was the big factor in assessing any particular group or section of town. The court also drew attention to the fact that council could raise as well as lower an assessment, once it was entered for appeal.

"Paths to Peace" Memorial Day Service

"Paths to Peace" was the subject of a forceful and timely message delivered by Rev. D. Davis in the United Church on Sunday afternoon at the annual service of Remembrance. The congregation was not as large as in former years, nor were there so many veterans on parade, but the weather was raw, and the service had not been as liberally advertised as on some occasions.

Let's talk ourselves out of war, not into it, was the theme of Rev. Davis' address.

"Human nature can be changed—there is a new and better way of living," he declared. Maintaining that we can have changed lives, he stated that this is the very core and heart of Christianity, what Christ came into the world for. "We've got to learn to live together, to get closer together, to harmonize," he said. There's even war going on in some of our homes, no Christianity and no love, he told his audience.

"Churchill said, 'Give us the tools and we'll finish the job,' but the job isn't finished," he continued. Rev. Davis stated that he agreed with Beverley Baxter, noted British writer, when he said that war against Jesus Christ was going on all over the world. He said that there was positive laziness in the art of Christian living.

Concluding he said, we had had heroes at war, and now we needed heroes at home.

Rev. Mr. Davis was assisted in the service by Rev. Frank Muir, new minister at the Stouffville Christian church, and specially printed programs were used for the occasion. The musical portion of the program was led by the United Church choir.

After the service veterans of two wars paraded to the park memorial gates and placed wreaths in memory of the boys who gave their lives. The provincial wreath was placed by Mrs. D. Davis, and the veterans' wreath by Mrs. John Castle, mothers who lost sons in the last war. Rev. E. Morton conducted this service at the park. The graves of veterans who found a last resting place in the local cemetery were also visited by the boys on parade.

The regular meeting of the W.M.S. of the United Church was held in the church on Thursday afternoon with the President, Mrs. Gunn, in the chair during the business period. Mrs. D. Davis gave a suitable reading on "Christian Stewardship." The supply work was discussed and it was agreed to divide the auxiliary into two groups for this department of the work, each group to begin work as soon as possible. Mrs. Riche's had charge of the worship service which was based on God's new commandment of "Love." Mrs. Williamson offered prayer and a very appropriate solo was given by Mrs. McConnochie. Mrs. Clayton Baker reviewed two chapters of the study book "Great is the Company," and was assisted by Mrs. Wood and several members. The use of a map and blackboard to impress through the "eye gate" the progress made in carrying the Bible from Palestine, to Rome, Germany, England and later to North America was most effective. Missionaries through almost insurmountable difficulties, succeeded in forming a written language for the Indians and then translated the Bible into the Indian tongue. Pressing westward, they carried with them the Bible to the Indians of Dakota and later to the Hawaiian and Gilbert Islands in the Pacific, in each case translating the Bible into the language of the people. The fruits of their labours were seen by our soldiers who were on those islands during the last war and found the Bible printed in the language of the natives.
