In these days of devastating atom bombs, remarkable long-distance airplanes, astounding flying rockets, and other untold factors, every man and woman across Canada should know at this critical time that current events in other countries of the world are of direct, immediate interest to the masses in this country since closeup observations as well as official information on Parliament Hill disclose definitely that the Canadian Government's attitude in the present world crisis is no mystery any longer.

Indeed, it can be reported that hints have been given that, while the Government has already made some important statements lately on its likely policies in the present international crisis, especially its call to immediate action on collective security for the democracies against any totalitarian tyranny, yet it has also hinted that other bold decisions may be forthcoming in this session to do its "full part" to preserve peace and security for the protection of the masses' life, liberty, and, in plain, everyday language, even property, particularly in view of the interdependence of nations today when about one-third of the Canadian dollar can be traced to foreign trade earnings.

It may be emphasized that, for the record, these momentous decisions by the Government are not only to prevent war, if possible, which is important enough in itself, but it can be said these are aimed to back up the alliance of free peoples everywhere to keep peace on democratic conceptions by quick, decisive actions in Ottawa as in other capitals during any emergency.

More married women are now working in full or part-time jobs and seeking such work across Canada, especially in the larger population centres, than ever before in peace-time, it is learned here, with the explanation being that, perhaps, it is all due to the rising cost-of-living forcing such women to help their husbands in meeting household expenses because this trend appears to be mainly in the so-called low-income groups. Another explanation heard is that this may be attributed to the fact that many married women had become accustomed to working outside their homes during the war so that they are not hesitating now to seek such work when more money is needed to support the home.

Considerable speculation is going on at present about the possibility of the Canadian dollar being devalued since a report of the International Monetary Fund has stated "some currencies" might have to be devalued as they were too high for world trading. The report indicated that "exchange rates in a number of countries will have to change in the near future because they are interfering with the flow of exports." However, it must be emphasized that Canada has rejected any plan to devalue the dollar since, as Finance Minister Abbott has said, "this country's economic program is not the kind for which that is an effective remedy."

The fact that three applications have been filed with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation for licenses to operate television stations is causing much talk here about the likely effects of such expansion on the movies.

The proposal of a rental insurance plan to encourage housing units to be built is meeting with criticism because it is feared that the rentals may be too high for the people who need such accommodation, especially when rentals of $30 a month are mentioned.

Though the U.S. is issuing a special stamp to observe the 100 years of peace with Canada, it is understood here that no such stamp will be issued by Canada.

The news that ERP money is being used by Britain to buy Canadian wheat, flour and bacon has brought the reaction in this capital that this will not have any direct effect on Canadian shipments to the U.K., except that the latter will now have U.S. dollars to pay for the Canadian supplies as these move across the seas.

The divorce problems of Canadian veterans are going to be studied by a special subcommittee of the Commons Veterans' Affairs Committee.

If Canada allows a free market for gold, it would not be in accordance with our obligations under the International Monetary Fund, said a top-ranking official here in testifying before a Senate Committee.

CREAMERY FINED

On April 21, 1948, an official of the Kincardine Creamery Limited, Kincardine, Ont., Reg. No. 34 pleaded guilty at Kincardine to having manufactured butter containing more than 16 per cent water and less than 80 per cent milk fat, contrary to The Dairy Industry Act, and was fined $20 with costs, plus $10—fees for analysis.

The charge was laid by an officer of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.
