

MONTMORENCY

CHERRIES

We expect shipments to arrive from our Bronte orchards the first of next week. Fruit from this orchard has given excellent satisfaction in years past and this year promises to be one of the best. Let us call you on arrival for the best in flavour satisfaction.

PEANUTS

Delicious, freshly roasted peanuts - hot from the roasting oven - Saturday afternoon and evening.

RATCLIFF & CO.

LEMONVILLE

Some farmers about here are haying, some had to drop the hay and cut fall wheat, and then the oats are right on too. A good harvest, all in a heap two weeks ahead of normal years.

Rae is home on her holidays. Mrs. Stan Hastings was in Muskoka last week for a day or two. Mr. and Mrs. Jefferies of Toronto visited the Padgett home here. We notice with interest a sleek new Dodge skipping about. As we write on the eve of the garden party this Wednesday night, things look promising for a delightful evening, a good time, and plenty to eat.

GREEN RIVER

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hetherington called recently on Mr. and Mrs. J. Nighswander. Mrs. Reg. Nighswander, daughter Thelma, and Margaret Clark, of Lockport, U.S., also spent a short vacation here. Mr. and Mrs. G. Freshwater attended his firm's picnic at Port Dalhousie on Saturday last. It was an ideal day for the joint picnic of G.R. Union, Whitevale United and Baptist Sunday Schools at Lynbrook Park. Some seventy-five people attended from our school with fun for everyone. The supper table we'll not forget for awhile, seated 250 people. On Aug. 1st, in Union S.S., Rev. John Jefferies of Mattagami Indian Reserve, Gogama, Ont., will speak to us. This young man only 21 years of age is a missionary teacher now attending University in Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Williams of Toronto visited with Mrs. E. Daffoe recently.

PINE ORCHARD

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Booth and Mr. and Mrs. R. Chapman spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Johnston. Glad to report Mr. Harry Brandon is improving and able to be out of bed. Mr. Lloyd Heaslip spent the weekend in our community. The Young People attended Youth for Christ meeting in Stouffville Saturday night. Miss Eileen Spofford is visiting her cousins, the Brillinger girls, a few days. Congratulations to our teacher and his pupils Joan Preston, Betty Sytama, Freddie Bruni for passing their entrance, making six pupils passing. Jack Sproxtion left on Thursday for the West coast. Jack has enlisted with the navy.

BETHESDA

Bethesda will hold their picnic Friday, July 23rd, in Ratcliff's Park. Postponed from the 16th on account of rain. Our sympathy goes out to Mrs. E. Thompson on the passing of her husband. Mrs. Thompson is a sister of Mr. Roy Smith, with whom they have been staying since coming from the West a few weeks ago. Our congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Leadley, on the birth of a daughter, in Brierbush Hospital. Bethesda Women's Institute held their regular meeting last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. A. Steckley. The guest speaker was Miss Ross, a worker from the Children's Aid Society. Our branch presented her with a complete layette for the society, of which they are so badly in need.

RINGWOOD

Master Gordon Kirk of Toronto is holidaying with his uncle, A. M. Grove. Miss Doris Vague, employed by Toronto Hydro, is enjoying a two-week vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Vague. Mrs. Taylor and baby daughter are spending a week in Kingston with her husband. Many from Ringwood attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Harry Spang last Friday afternoon at Peach's Church. Mr. and Mrs. Spang and their two daughters were Ringwood residents for many years and sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved husband and family. Miss Priscilla Pipher is holidaying with relatives in Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Yakely are holidaying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Brownsberger. Mrs. Frank Atkinson and daughter Janet, also Mr. Stewart Vague spent the weekend with relatives near Minden. Mr. and Mrs. Ted Krainyk enjoyed a motor trip to Niagara Falls over the weekend.

AUDLEY

Miss Joblin of Port Perry is visiting with her sister, Mrs. Henry Westney. Mrs. W. Cox is recovering from her recent accident whereby she suffered a fractured ankle. Her husband is in the hospital for treatment on his leg at the military hospital. Mrs. Wonnaeott of Pickering spent 30th birthday at the home of her son Sydney here on Sunday. His brothers Arthur and Norman with their families attended. Harvesting of wheat, barley, and some oats will commence this week. The crops are all looking well. The recent rains helped much in the filling. The community is giving a nuptial shower to Miss Mildred Brown at the home of her parents

OUR CAPITAL CORRESPONDENT

In September, 1947, King returned to Kitchener after the lapse of some years and, step by step, revisited the scenes of his childhood. The people of North Waterloo, who had elected King to Parliament in 1908, had, however, turned their backs on him in the reciprocity election of 1911 and the home-town boy had always felt the hurt deeply. Too deeply, perhaps, because in 1919 when he chose to stand as a candidate in Prince, P.E.I., and was afforded an acclamation there, the people of Kitchener and North Waterloo, in their turn, felt that King had deliberately snubbed them. But time had healed these old wounds, and when the Prime Minister arrived in Kitchener on that sunny September day in 1947 the slights and misunderstandings of the past, if not entirely forgotten, were most certainly completely forgiven. King was just another old Berlin boy who had made good and who was now coming back to renew old acquaintances, and, one and all, irrespective of their political leanings, the townspeople turned out to give him a royal welcome.

King lost no time in visiting "Woodside," the fine old 10-room grey brick home in which he had spent the most important years of his youth and which in its heyday was one of the show places of the town and district. He found it greatly altered, for it had fallen upon evil days. During the depression a number of relief families had been crowded into it. Over the years neglect and vandalism had left their mark. The place was falling slowly but surely into decay. When King announced his intention of paying a visit to Kitchener interested parties went out to "Woodside". They found nearly every window in the house broken. Hurriedly they made what repairs they could.

The sight of the old house standing there in the middle of the little wood, so desolate and down at heel must have brought a sudden pang of loneliness and regret to the heart of the home-coming Prime Minister. In vain he must have sought to picture it as it had once looked with its wide, sweeping lawns, its carefully tended flower beds, its great welcoming windows and ivy covered walls. Like the boy who had once romped with his brother and sisters, playing hide-and-seek in the tangle of the wood, the house, too, had grown old. The venerableness of time now marked them both.

Whatever were the Prime Minister's thoughts as he stood there with a few of his old friends about him, contemplating the crazy handiwork of time, he was soon to undergo one of the most pleasant and moving experiences of his life, an experience which was to sweep away as with a single stroke the dust and litter of the years, and which was to invest the old house with some of the glory of its happier days.

Out of the house and up the path towards King came a little fair-haired, blue-eyed girl, six-year-old Marilyn Kilbasco, the daughter of the Polish couple who for nine years had occupied part of the first floor of the house and who now called it "home."

She was dressed in her Sunday best and a bright ribbon tied her hair. In one tiny hand she held a single flower. It was for the Prime Minister, and in carefully rehearsed phrases she explained that she had come to welcome him to "Woodside." As she stood on her toes to place the flower in his buttonhole King leaned down and returned the child's infectious smile. Then Marilyn kissed him.

The sun shone more brightly then; the woods seemed filled with song, and the light and the music filled the rooms of the old house and made it gay and young. "Woodside" was "Woodside" once again! King had a wonderful time from then on. He strolled all over the old estate, asked rosy-checked Mrs. Kilbasco to show him "the old spring," sat down in the Kilbasco living room which had once been his father's library, picked his way up the creaking stairway to the room in which he had slept as a boy.

He poked an inquiring head out the window and wanted to know where stood the tree he had remembered as a boy. Then he wandered into his brother's bedroom. He was pleased to find that the original floors of the old house were standing up. Little by little memories came flooding back. He recalled that he had spent the most important nine years of his youth at "Woodside," his eighth to his seventeenth year. "It brings mixed joy and sorrow," he remarked.

this Friday evening, previous to her wedding in the Greenwood church on the 29th Inst. The best wishes of the community go with her.
