Employed on One Farm 37 Years

Two old friends and neighbours celebrated their birthdays together on Friday at Brooklin, Ont., Harry Stepany, 90, and Bill Dyer, Sr., 76. Mrs. Wm. Nesbitt, at whose home Mr. Stepany lives, made a little tea party and the celebrants had a few friends in.

Mr. Stepany came to Brooklin in 1911 to work on the Ernest Nesbitt farm, two and a half miles north-east of the village.

"In all those years there has never been a word of dissatisfaction from either party," Mrs. Nesbitt Sr. said, speaking about the nonagenarian whom she referred to as "a well educated man, a great reader with a remarkable memory."

Mr. Stepany was born in England and still talks with a strong accent. He remains in good health although his eyesight is failing somewhat. His garden is wonderful this summer. Through all these years both employer and employee have remained on the terms of friends and in his days of superannuation Mr. Stepany continues to live and work with his friends. He is a member of the Anglican Church.

It was explained that Mr. Dyer's birthday was not actually until Saturday, but the custom of years has been to celebrate them together.

Truth About Stolen Cakes Wins Dismissal

"Your candor is refreshing, I am sure you are telling the truth," said Crown Attorney Arleigh Armstrong when a group of smart-acting lads from over Uxbridge way, confessed to taking $6.00 worth of cakes from the restaurant.

"Why did you take the cakes?" asked the crown.

"When we took them we had full intention of paying but later when no one was at the cash register to collect, I guess we just got smart and walked out," was the reply of the accused lad.

"Ah—at last the truth—like a breath of fresh air," whispered the crown.

James Johnson, waiter at the restaurant, said 10 men walked into the restaurant, ordered sandwiches and left with some cakes after having their meal.

Asked by the crown if he requested money as they left, he said he only saw the last of them leave.

"I don't blame him for not approaching them. He would have to be a hero," declared the court.

"Theft is a serious charge and I do not think the evidence justifies a conviction," said the magistrate in dismissing the case.

Don't Forget Your GROWING CHICKS

In the rush of summer work, it's easy to forget your growing birds on range. But if you skimp them now, they'll skimp you next fall! And the way both egg and poultry markets are shaping up, it will really PAY to give them the time and feed—your investment in good growing mash should prove mighty profitable.

We stock and recommend Purina Chick Growena (feed alone) — Growing Chow (feed with grain)

When your pullets begin to lay, make sure they get what they need to make plenty of eggs—and keep on making 'em. Ask us about the Purina line of laying mashes. If you've got good grain, we recommend

PURINA LAY CHOW

To keep up egg production, keep up the feed intake. Wet mash is O.K., but it draws flies, sours if there's any left over, takes time to get ready. Here's something easier and better—

LAYING CHECKERS

If you have a whitewashing job to do, try Purina's new combination fly killer and whitener—"2 in 1"—Purina Special Farm Powder. It combines long-lasting DDT fly killing effect with a first class white cold water paint.

AFTER COCCIDIOSIS

Stimulate chicks' appetite with Purina Chek-R-Ton.

PURINA CHEK-R-TON

After 6 or 8 weeks on range, most pullets have a dose of roundworms... enough to slow them up. CHEK-R-TON knocks out the roundworms, gives them a "lift." Just mix it in their mash—full directions on the can.

Your calves and young stock should be growing, not going back! A little good growing feed will keep them coming. Ask us about
