For $6 a Week
A Man Can Live
If He Tries To

Los Angeles—Albert Enoch, 57-year-old chemist, has been living for some years now in an economic twilight which he calls "the far side of the sun."

He gets along—adequately and without complaint—on a total of $6 a week. He earns the $6 himself. Until a few weeks ago Enoch had resigned himself to obscure poverty. He set but one condition for the remaining years of his life—financial independence.

How he attained that goal—on six self-earned dollars a week—was one of those human-interest stories that go unnoticed in a busy metropolis.

Then his modest design for existence suddenly became a cause celebre—an issue in California's current pension controversy.

"The pensioners in the hotel where I live jumped all over me the day the newspaper carried a story about my $6 a week budget," Enoch says. "I used to have a lot of friends at the hotel. Now I haven't any."

"They say my $6 a week, for which I am indebted to no one, makes their $75-a-month state-paid pensions look a little like a fraud. Well, what's done is done. I meant no harm."

His carefully-planned budget for staple foods comes to only $1.50 a week. It consists of small eggs, bacon ends, evaporated milk, ground meat, fish, honey, peanut butter and coffee. He also buys a sack of tobacco and has about 20 cents left over from the $1.50.

His only other expense is $3.75 a week for a hotel room.

"When my leg doesn't bother me," says Enoch, "I walk to the wholesale market and get my vegetables free. After 10 o'clock in the morning you can salvage considerable fruit and vegetables from the big containers where they put produce that is unsaleable, but still good."

"Today I got onions, potatoes, celery, carrots, lettuce, peppers, corn and grapes."

"From the Salvation Army anyone may get bread and cakes for the asking. I work for my clothes at a church. You can get a good free haircut in the basement of the Union Rescue Mission, although I usually try to give the barber a quarter. They also have facilities there to press your clothes and take a bath."

Margarine Grabs
35 Million Pounds
Of Butter Trade

Despite a price reduction of eight to 10 cents a pound, Canadians this year have eaten 35,000,000 pounds less butter than in 1948. Consumption is down three pounds a person.

J. H. Duplan, president of the National Dairy Council of Canada, cited these figures to illustrate the effect of uncertain export markets and the inroads of margarine competition.

The serious surplus problem would be discussed Dec. 12 and 13 in Ottawa, he said, at a meeting of more than 20 National Dairy Council directors.

Due to the drop in butter consumption, he told the Ontario Creamery Association, Canadians this year would consume less milk products per person than at any other time in the last 15 years.

"The consumption of margarine in those provinces where it is sold has in the space of only one year exceeded the per capita consumption in the United States, where it has been sold for more than 75 years," he said.

As a direct result of margarine competition, the purchasing power of 400,000 dairy farmers had been reduced this year by at least $50,000,000. "And this reduction," he said, "will be directly reflected in the income of all other industries and businesses."

The price spread on creamery butter between producer and consumer was one of the smallest of any food product. The farmer received 89 cents from every dollar the consumer paid for butter.

"Compare this to margarine made entirely from foreign oils," he said. "It has been estimated that only about 25 cents out of every consumer dollar goes back to the primary producer and that in a foreign country at the expense of our critical foreign exchange position."

WHY THE DOOR HAS NO HANDLE

Best known painting by the famous English artist, Holman Hunt, is "The Light of the World," which shows Christ standing in a garden at midnight. He is holding a lantern in his left hand and his right hand is knocking on a heavily-pannelled door.

An art critic who was present when the picture was unveiled approached Hunt and said: "Excuse me, Mr. Hunt, but surely you haven't finished the picture? That door has no handle."

"That is the door to the human heart," Hunt replied. "It can be opened only from the inside."

Sewage Disposal For Rural Homes

"Rural Sewage Disposal," is the title of an extremely useful booklet published by the O.A.C. Guelph. The book, just off the press, can be obtained from local agricultural representatives or from the Statistics and Publications Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Authors of the book are H. W. Kitching and T. R. CV. Rokeby of the Department of Agricultural Engineering of the O.A.C., Guelph. The Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Engineering is also a sponsor in its publication.

The book contains fullest details on water carrying methods for homes with running water available as well as non water carriage methods for homes without running water. Diagrams and scale drawings are given, dealing with the installation and operation of a septic tank; the theory of the septic tank system of sewage disposal; installation of house sewers, soil and waste plumbing; disposal trench and a hundred and one other things.

In fact the book offers expert advice on installation of sanitary conveniences for the farmer and suburban dweller, hitherto found only in urban homes where water system and sewers are provided by the municipality.

"There is great need for information on sewage systems for homes and other premises not accessible to public sewers," says A. E. Berry, Director of the Sanitary Engineering Division, Ontario Department of Health, in a foreword.

"This publication is an effort to supply that information. It gives comprehensive data on different methods which can be utilized. Local conditions will affect the choice of method. Most emphasis in this pamphlet is placed on the water carried system as a modern method of disposal of these wastes. Where drainage conditions are suitable, the septic tank system can be expected to function effectively, if it is properly installed and given reasonable maintenance."

DIDN'T BUY TICKET
BUT WINS A CAR

A 21-year-old Toronto separate school teacher won a new car in Kitchener last week with a draw ticket she didn't know existed.

It may have been a little confusing at first but Anne Fedyk, 149 Euclid Ave., Toronto, says the new auto "is the greatest thing I could ever get."

The prize-winning ticket in the Knight of Columbus draw at the Lyric theatre was purchased for her by a Kitchener friend. Miss Fedyk knew nothing of the ticket.

When a club official telephoned her she at first believed it was her Kitchener friend calling. Later, it is understood, the car's "donor" explained matters in a telephone conversation.

Miss Fedyk, who has never owned a car, says her first auto will enable her father and mother to get around more. Her father is blind.

1950 Plowing Match
To Be at Alliston

The Nottawasaga Valley Plantations and neighboring farms, near Alliston, will be the scene of the 1950 International Plowing Match, Secretary-Manager J. A. Carroll of the Ontario Department of Agriculture announces. Mr. Carroll and V. C. Porteous of Owen Sound, President of the Ontario Plowmen's Association, have already visited the scene and made preliminary arrangements for the big event.

Clarke Young, secretary-treasurer of the Plowmen's Association and W. E. Dowey, past president, have also visited the Alliston location. October will be the month of the plowing match. Dates will be arranged later.

SAVE MILK

Raise Calves on
PURINA CALF STARTENA

Do you grudge the milk you're putting into your calves, and wish you could put it into the milk cans instead? With Purina's dry-feeding plan you can ship most of that milk. You feed a limited amount of milk for only one month, then cut it off entirely.

Raising calves the Calf Startena way saves time, saves work, saves money, as well as milk. It's worth investigating—ask us about it!

Got any young pigs coming along? Want to take them past weaning without the usual setback? Get them used to eating this good solid ration (Sow & Pig Chow mixed 1 to 3 with your chop)—and see the difference!

SOW & PIG CHOW

Get EXTRA Eggs!

Along about this time pullets often lose interest, slacken off in production. Here are two things to do to help them snap out of it:

1. Give them a treatment with Purina Chek-R-Ton—just mix in the mash. Chek-R-Ton stimulates appetites, tones up digestions, helps bring them back.
2. Give them an extra feed of extra-good feed. Sprinkle 3 to 5 lbs. of Purina Checkers on top of the mash at noon each day. Birds like them, eat them readily . . . you get the good effects of wet mash without the bother of it. On your next trip to town, take home a bag of

It may seem early to be talking about baby chicks—but the man who makes real egg money in 1950 will be the one who starts his chicks early, and raises them right. It's none too early to be cleaning up the brooder house, checking up on good chicks, placing your order for a really early start—and resolving that you'll get them away "flying" for 1950 profits on PURINA CHICK STARTENA
