Apple Grower Keeps Help Hale and Hearty

To the apple-pickers' ball they came the other day—100 employees of G. N. Irwin's Red Wing orchards, 15 miles south east of Stouffville, near Whitby.

The final event of the apple-picking season, the ball was held in an old barn and everything was on the house. It's no ordinary barn either. There's no hay in the loft nor chaff on the floor.

Mr. Irwin has spent time and money fixing up the barn as a recreation centre for 24 full-time workers and the 70-odd pickers he employs in the fall.

Among other things the barn has air-conditioning, a ballroom, a billiard-room, a bowling alley, a lounge and a lunch counter.

His wages may not be as high as those paid by some other farms, Irwin says, but he is trying to give his workers everything they would have in the city.

At the farm full-time workers get a house, all the milk they want and their fuel in addition to wages. The farm covers a total of 500 acres, most of which is devoted to orchards.

Show Beef $5.00 Lb. Wether Lamb at $7.00

Chicago, Dec. 6—The Golden Jubilee edition of the International Live Stock Exposition closed here Saturday in the International Amphitheatre at the Chicago Stock Yards after setting new marks in quality, attracting a record-smashing attendance, and establishing peak prices in spectacular show auctions.

The eight-day attendance exceeded slightly last year's 450,000 record gate.

Stockmen and breeders who thronged the show rings said they had never seen such an array of quality in the large classes for 31 breeds of livestock. The Aberdeen-Angus breeding cattle contest was the largest ever seen at any show in the history of that breed.

Show auctions, both fat and breeding stock, brought owners nearly two million dollars. A record average of $44.00 per cwt. was paid for 66 carloads of cattle. It was four dollars higher than last year's average and brought a total of half a million dollars.

Steers raised by boys and girls for the Junior Livestock Feeding Contest were auctioned at an average of $45.67 per cwt. another record.

A 1200-pound Hereford steer, Grand Champion, from Texas, sold to Dearborn Motors, Detroit, at $11.50 per pound.

The buyers plan to tour the animal throughout the United States in a specially-built trailer.

The champion steer of the Junior contest, 1330-pound Aberdeen-Angus, owned by Bonnie Lu Logan, 15, of Van Wert, Ohio, sold at $5.00 per pound, a dollar higher than the previous record. Ohio State University, Columbus, sold their grand champion barrow, a Berkshire, for $3.00 a pound.

The University of Kentucky, Lexington, made a clean sweep of the wether lamb show. They exhibited both the grand and reserve grand champion wethers and the grand and reserve grand champion pens of 3 wethers. Their individual top lamb sold at $7.00 a pound, just 50c under last year's all time record price.
