

Paraguayan Interlude Written by Smiths Issued by Herald Press

The new book "Paraguayan Interlude" just issued by the Herald Press, Scottsdale, Pennsylvania, and written by Professors Willard and Verna Smith of Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana, reports the pioneering efforts of Mennonite refugees in the untamed tropical jungles in the Paraguayan Chaco. The account is based on letters written to friends and on copies of letters and reports which Mr. Smith made to Mennonite Central Committee headquarters. As director for two years of the relief and refugee work in South America, Smith speaks from first-hand experience.

A few degrees north of the Tropic of Capricorn in the jungle of the Paraguayan Chaco Mennonite refugees have established new communities where little more than twenty years ago only reptiles, wild animals, and primitive Indians lived. To this land in this totally undeveloped region came refugees for conscience' sake who had left their homes and lands where they had lived for generations.

In "Paraguayan Interlude" Smiths give the story of the wanderings of the homeless people, their settlement, and development of raw land as they hewed down trees, built crude homes, and established life on a truly pioneering basis resembling early pioneers in America generations ago. The brave struggle against an unfamiliar soil and climate and against the ravages of insect pests is an epic touching to the heart. The seemingly futile attempt of the colonists to hack into submission a stubborn region fit for habitation is a story nearly unbelievable in modern-day life.

Part of the work of the Smiths was to make contacts with South American governments for the Mennonite refugees as they entered the continent. Many were the hours of frustration in waiting and in unloosening the red tape which held up the approval of permits. For two years the Smiths labored first hand with the colonists and with the governments to help both to understand each other. In appreciation of the splendid attitude of the Paraguayan government in offering the refugees a home and in granting the "privilegium" which permits complete freedom of worship including full rights and privileges in exemption from obligatory military service in time of peace or war, the Smiths laid the groundwork to establish a home for lepers who roam uncared for.

The story is told with a fine sensitive regard for the refugees and for the government. "Paraguayan Interlude" is in essence a rich travelogue, reporting on the trip to South America, the various visits to the Mennonite colonies, and to the cities in the different countries. Life in the rural areas of countries in the southern hemisphere is vividly described by the Smiths.

Willard Smith, the co-author, was born on a farm near Eureka, Illinois. After attending the public schools of the community he secured his preparatory schooling at Hesston Academy and at Goshen College. In 1937 he received his doctorate in history at the University of Indiana, qualifying him for accurate observations and sympathetic understanding. Verna Smith, wife of Willard Smith, graduated from Goshen College. She wrote two chapters of the book.

Madill, Main street, weighed a pound and ten ounces, while Jack O'Boyle left a sample at Stiver Bros. seed store weighing a pound and 14 ounces, and weighed two pounds when first dug.

Skirt Hooks Lever, Tractor Lurches, Crushes Girl, 18

As 18-year-old Betty Walsh was jumping from a tractor Thursday at Agincourt her skirt hooked onto the gearshift lever, throwing the machine from neutral into high gear. It lurched forward and crushed both her legs.

The girl had been operating the tractor on the farm of Earl Toms. Toms was gathering corn from one of his fields and throwing it on a wagon. After the harvest, Miss Walsh drove the tractor to the shelter of a large tree. She was just leaving work when the accident occurred.

"Daddy, what makes it hum?"

"HARNESSED RAINDROPS, SONNY!" It's a true answer...

In Shipshaw powerhouse you are awed by the hum of twelve gigantic generators. They are driven by rain and snow which fill Lake St. John and pour down the Saguenay River.

The water is channelled to a man-made lake on top of a hill. Then it rushes down tunnels chiselled through solid rock to dash against turbines like the model at which the boy is peering — but weighing 50 tons.

The turbines drive generators. The electricity they generate speeds to nearby Arvida. There it refines shining aluminum out of bauxite from British Guiana.

Over 1000 Canadian companies form aluminum into all sorts of useful articles. All this means work for Canadians. This country supplies nothing but the raindrops — and the brains, hands and enterprise to harness them.

The hum in the power house at Shipshaw is a hymn of progress. It is a sound of Canada's standard of living going up...
