Mr. Eli Lehman who has been in Toronto General Hospital with a broken leg, is expected home for Christmas. The injured man will be placed in a cast this week.

We read in contemporary journals of schools whose officials feel Christmas exams are unnecessary evils, and have therefore abolished them. One such article states "Pretylle holiday exams, what youngsters always regarded as an evil, and scarcely a necessary one, they and scarcely a necessary one, they felt, are now growing unpopular among members of the teaching profession. In fact, lengthy exam sets are fast losing popularity among teachers."

"Some teachers feel Christmas, particularly, is an inopportune time to spring a set of exams on a pupil. At this time of year there are too many distractions. Also under the new curriculum, more emphasis is placed on the social aspects of Christmas, and little thought can be given by the student to the significance of the Yule season when exams are facing him."

Nevertheless, the fact remains that the school year is a short one, when it's manifold activities and interruptions are taken into account, and in it a great deal of work is expected to be covered. Some students do their only serious studying of the year on the brink of examinations, and if these Stouffville High and Public Schools set written exams this year. In the Public, some examinations were scheduled before the holidays, and some after, at the teacher's discretion. In the High School the tests are before Christmas, with the exception of Grade 13, in which they will take place early in the New Year.

Some school officials see sets of exams which last a week or two as a hindrance to the pupil rather than a good basis for judging his work. Some students, often the brilliant type, cannot stand the teach in Ontario. College officials said his record has been "brilliant."
