JUNIOR FARMERS TURN OUT IN RECORD NUMBERS

According to President Don Middleton of Granton, seen above with Eleanor Saraouse, left, Waterford, and Sharon O'Sullivan of Dundas, the 10th annual conference of the Ontario Junior Farmers' Association held in Toronto, was a great success with some

1,240 on hand for the ev- work as typists or clerks ent. Every one of 43 counties in the province was represented along with many districts in Northern Ontario. One -fifth of the enrolment comprised teen- agers still in school. Three out of five live on the farm, whereas others in nearby centres. Discussions at the big gathering centred around farm .topics which resulted in certain recommendations being made and presented to the Ontario Federation of Agriculture which succeeded the junior group.

ual fate of his brethren because the poultry department of McGill university's · agricultural college is busy developing a medium-sized, broad-breasted turkey which can be produced as economically as possible, needed him for breeding purposes.

"Mr. Mac" and his fortunate companions wear red-tinted spectacles to prevent them from seeing blood on other turkeys — a sight which might provoke mayhem, according to Prof. William Maw, who is pictured with his prize pupil.

What Wilfred Crump of Leamington, Ont., planned as a surprise for his wife and three children turned out to be a bit of a shock for all concerned. It all began when Mr. Crump decided to fly to England to surprise his wife for Christmas. Mrs. Crump, a pretty 27-year-old British brun-. ette, had left Leamington in September to visit her parents who live just outside

Birmingham, taking her children with her. She explained that her mother was quite ill and she felt the visit was necessary. After her visit with the family, Mrs. Crump had originally planned to return Jan. 22 but she became homesick for her husband and booked passage to sail on the Franconia from Liverpool on Dec. 19, hoping to surprise her husband at the New Year. Meanwhile, husband Wilfred, in Leamington, had grown homesick for his family and not knowing his wife's plans, flew to England, and in so doing crossed her path over the Atlantic. After spending a few days at his parents' home, Mr. Crump flew to Windsor, where he is seen above with his wife and family.
