Voice of Prophecy Bible Questions And Answers

Question—Our preacher wants a vacation. Do you think this is right? Shouldn't a minister have such a high regard for the Lord's work that he would never want to be free from it?
Answer—It is not hard to give counsels of perfection to other people. Of course, a true minister never wants to be free from his ministry. As the apostle says, "This one thing I do." Philippians 3:13. However, most ministers seem to be human beings and, as such, are subject to the wear and tear and tension of life.
Our Lord Jesus Christ recognized the need for periods of change or rest for His disciples, as we read in Mark 6:30, 31: "And the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told Him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught. And He said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat."

A vacation to a minister, or to any other Christian, ought to be a time of real recreation—recreation of body, brain, and spirit. May we suggest the following test questions as to recreation? Do my recreations rest and strengthen, or weary and weaken the body or the brain? Do they make resistance to temptation easier or harder? Do they increase or lessen love of virtue, purity, kindness, and love? Do they draw me nearer to, or remove me farther from, Christ? Do they waste time and energy and money? Do they fit me for honest work and diligent study?

Q.—Do you think ministers should receive a salary?
A.—Not unless you expect them to eat, wear clothes, educate their children, and exist as human beings. If they must do these things and give their whole time to God's work, they most certainly are entitled to support. The apostle Paul says in 1 Timothy 5:17, 18: "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine. For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, The labourer is worthy of his reward."

Q.—Why is a preacher called a pastor?
A.—The word "pastor" means shepherd, and refers to the minister's care over the flock of God. The word is used in the New Testament—Ephesians 4:11: "And He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers."

Q.—What about John 10:16? And who are the "other sheep"?
A.—Let us read the verse and see what it says: "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear My voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." The "other sheep" are the perishing Gentiles. Christ loves all nations. "All we like sheep have gone astray; . . . and the Lord hath laid on Him [that is, Christ] the iniquity of us all." Isaiah 53:6. Jesus is the Good Shepherd. "The good shepherd giveth His life for the sheep." John 10:11. "He shall gather the lambs with His arm, and carry them in His bosom." Isaiah 40:11.

Shade Trees for Small Properties

Canadians considering planting shade trees around their homes could profitably look at the downtown areas of our older cities. Here are the plantings of a few decades ago when forest trees such as American elm and native maples were used for home beautification. These have now matured and been pruned up to towering heads of foliage which cut off all air circulation. Their root systems are of course in proportion to their tops and often heave walks. By taking food and moisture these large trees make it most difficult to maintain a sward of grass or to do much gardening near them.

Mr. K. G. Coates of the Kapuskasing Experimental Station says that this situation need not arise in the future if suitable trees are planted today; particularly now that garden and houses are smaller than in the past. If a tree of correct proportions is planted there will be no need to prune and mutilate it to keep it within bounds. And it should be remembered that a tree that proves too large fifteen years after planting will require skilled labour to remove.

The Horticulture Division of the Experimental Farms Service have been testing deciduous trees for their usefulness on many locations across Canada. After several years of recording their characteristics and abilities, recommendations are listed for the following purposes: street and boulevard; public parks and rural estates; small properties; windbreaks; or as flowering specimens.

The following list is submitted as a guide for planting shade trees on smaller city lots. They will reach maturity at heights up to a maximum of 25 feet. Some unusual colour of foliage or good flowering habits which make them of double value.
"Burr oak" (Quercus macrocarpa), the most hardy of the species growing in Canada. Leaves are a glossy green above and hairy grey beneath. It has a large acorn.
"Chinese elm" (Ulmus pumila), a rapid grower which in leaf and stature is a miniature of the American elm.
"Ginnala maple" (Acer ginnala), leaves are smaller than most maple, deeply lobed and turn brilliant colours in autumn. Seed clusters with a rose tinge are conspicuous all summer. "Tatarian maple" has similar foliage but grows a little taller.

"Japanese lilac" (Syringa japonica), a non-suckering lilac with light green foliage. It is late and often biennial in flowering.
"May Day Tree" (Prunus padus commutata), occasionally grown with 2 or 3 trunks but does not sucker from the bottom. Flowers are most often white and hang in 8-inch cat-tails.

"Mountain ash" (Sorbus americana), its fern like compound leaves do not give a dense shade. It is best known for its white flowers and red fruit clusters which hang on well into winter.
"Mulberry" (Morus alba), tree is always round headed and because of both its flowers and leaves is an interesting subject. Its fruit is edible.
"Russian olive" (Elaeagnus angustifolia), branches and elongated leaves of silvery green combine to give this tree-like shrub a lacey effect. It will stand drought.

"Rosy-bloom crab-apple" (Malus pumila niedzwetzkyana), are a group with pink to carmen flowers, ornamental fruit and purple bronze leaves. Recommended varieties are Simcock, Timiskaming, Makamik and Sissipuk.

The South Sea cruise the HMCS Ontario took will long be remembered, for her crew have photos to remind them of the voyage which lasted three months and took them to faraway places. In Esquimalt, B.C., where the destroyer berthed after the cruise, Petty Officer Donald Trim of Victoria, B.C., showed this photo of one of the friends he made in Tarongia Park, New Zealand. The friend is a koala bear.
