Prices Suggested For Fall Wheat And Rye Seed

The Seed Marketing and Publicity Committee of the Ontario Soil and Crop Improvement Association at a recent meeting recommended the following minimum retail prices of seed wheat and rye—

Winter Wheat—No. 1 seed grown from Registered seed $1.80; Registered No. 1, $2.00; Registered No. 1 Genesee $2.15 and No. 1 Rye $1.40. These are recommended retail per bushel prices f.o.b. farm or local shipping point, bags included and treated.

These prices are somewhat lower than last year and should provide ample encouragement for all growers requiring seed to purchase the registered grades which are sealed and graded by Plant Products inspectors. Purchasers are thus assured of the variety, high standard of quality, and germination.

No dwarf Bunt is allowed in the registered grades and this year all wheat for registration is doubly checked first by field inspection and again by microscopic inspection of the grain to assure freedom of Dwarf Bunt in the registered grades.

The quality of Ontario seed wheat is excellent this year.

The newer varieties of Winter Wheat are resistant to Loose Smut but are not resistant to Stinking Smut or Bunt. Seed treatment will, however, control this Smut and all seed wheat should be treated.

For the few cents per acre more that the registered grades cost, it is good assurance to use only the highest grades which in most cases are sold treated so that there is no trouble or cost in treating.

The new Genesee variety, introduced last year in quantity, is a high yielding variety although slightly weaker in the straw than Dabul or Cornell 595. Seed supplies of this variety are adequate this year at only a small advance over other varieties.

Rye is becoming more popular as a pasture and green manure crop. Rye provides excellent pasture in the late Fall and early Spring, and is used extensively as a plow-down crop in preparation for Tobacco, Potatoes and other cash crops.

Expect Heavy Entries By Agricultural Societies at C.N.E.

Agricultural Societies were reminded today that entries in grain and sheaves classes at the Canadian National Exhibition must be forwarded to the Manager, Department of Agriculture, Canadian National Exhibition not later than August 14th.

F. A. Lashley, Director of Agricultural and Horticultural Societies, is anticipating a large number of entries this year in view of the fact that prize money has been substantially increased. Prizes awarded will be divided in the proportion of 60 per cent to the member contributing and 40 per cent to the society.

Owing to soil and climate conditions in various parts of the province the exhibits in these classes will be placed in three divisions with prizes paid to the winners, in each. No. 1 district comprises Muskoka, Parry Sound, Haliburton, Nipissing, Manitoulin, Algoma and other districts in new Ontario.

No. 2 district takes in the counties of York and Simcoe and all counties to the east with No. 3 district being made up of all counties west and south-west of York and Simcoe.

Grain and seed entries must include 5 lots of grain or seed, three lots to be chosen from one each of winter wheat, spring wheat, barley, early oats, late oats, and two lots from clover, alfalfa, timothy, corn, rye, buckwheat, flax, field peas, field beans, and soy beans.

A change in the regulations this year will permit a member to enter two lots in this class. Previously each member was restricted to one exhibit.

A society may enter three sheaves but must not include more than two sheaves of one kind of crop.

A fool thinks he is smart because he can ask questions that a wise man can't answer.

Pre-Harvest Killing Of Potato Vines

With the advent of mechanical methods of harvesting potatoes, the general use of insecticides such as DDT, and organic fungicides which promote growth and delay maturity of potatoes, vine killing has become increasingly popular with potato growers. The reasons for killing potato vines prematurely are to help growers spread their harvest season, to prevent secondary growth of tubers, the oversizing of tubers, and the development of late blight. Also, the killing of vigorous vines prevents the clogging of diggers, and speeds harvesting operations.

The methods most generally used for killing potato vines at the present time, says N. M. Parks, Division of Horticulture, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, are chemical sprays or dusts, or the use of mechanical shredders or beaters. Each of these methods has certain advantages and disadvantages depending upon circumstances. Until further research work has been done no one method can definitely be recommended as being superior in efficiency.

The chemicals now most frequently used for vine killing are the dinitros in spray form, either with or without activators, and aro cyanamid as a dust. Other chemicals such as copper sulphate and common salt in spray form have proved effective, but certain hazards attend their use. Copper sulphate in the absence of lime and copper sulphate and common salt mixtures should be used with caution unless the spray machine is resistant to such corrosive materials.

Vine killers are sold under various trade names such as Dows' 66 Improved; Sinox General; Adams Handy Killer; Green Cross Top Killer, etc.; all of which if used in accordance with directions on the container will effectively kill potato vines. Aro cyanamid special grade in dust form, applied when the plants are wet with dew or after rain, has proved very effective for potato vine killing or plant defoliation. It produces a gradual and complete kill of the foliage within a few days after application; giving much the same effect as a light frost or natural maturity. With a gradual killing of the tops the danger of discoloration of tubers usually associated with a rapid killing of the vines is lessened.

Aro cyanamid contains 21 per cent nitrogen; therefore in one product it offers the two-fold advantage of a vine killer and fertilizer. The residual nitrogen will be available for the succeeding crop.

The pre-harvest killing of potato vines is a practice which is recommended and can be employed by most growers to advantage.

One of the reasons for the high incidence of unemployment is that millions of people are working to support automobiles.

With the increasing hazards of highway travel, there may be a big market ahead for a new lightweight aluminum crash helmet developed in Europe. It not only takes unnecessary weight off your mind; tests proved that it also exhibits less "dent depth" when objects are dropped on it—with no one underneath, we should add.

Sounds like a sensible cheapie for construction workers too. Certainly lots of aluminum articles developed for one use have been quickly adopted for others... a process which has helped build heavy demand for Canadian aluminum both at home and in foreign markets.
