Goodbye Connie and Hello Dianne! I suppose we will all spend the next few days worrying and wondering whether or not Dianne will make her presence felt around here any stronger than Connie did. Outside of a few trees and limbs and a few fields of sick looking corn crops there doesn't seem to be too much evidence that we had a visitor named Connie. This correspondent has 2 broken window panes to replace, by failing to have the window firmly in place and, needless to say, it didn't do anything to settle jangled nerves when it crashed on the floor.

Work Fields After Harvest, Stops Weeds

After harvest cultivation serves two purposes, in that it exposes the roots of perennial plants to the hot midsummer sun; and also encourages weed seeds to grow during the fall, so that fall plowing and winter frosts may kill them. The Field Crops Branch of the Ont. Dept. of Agriculture advises that for the best results in both these objectives, after harvest cultivation should be early and shal-

Two weeks of hot dry August weather will have more effect on twitch roots turned up to the sun than two months of cool, showery fall weather. There is also the likelihood that this year's crop of weed seeds will grow during the fall if they are mixed with two or three inches of soil, but if they are buried six inches deep they will not grow until next spring when cultivation brings them close to the surface. They then will grow with next year's crop. The Field Crops Branch advises that the one-way disc is a good implement for after harvest cultivation. It can cut all root crowns, does not go too deep and leaves the ground loose and with a good trash cover. It may be followed later with harrows or cultivator to finish the job. Because many spring sown, early harvested crops are seeded down, after harvest cultivation is not possible. This makes it more important to concen-

A hitchhiking Leghorn in Darlington, S.C., caused laughter. Farmer Nelson Alford discovered the bird sitting placidly atop several bales of hay on his pickup truck after a five-mile ride to town.

That is about as rare as a fiveyolk egg-or one in 1,000,000, 000. Alfred McNamee Jr., of Oakland, Calif., said his firm handled about 1,000,000,000 eggs in 38 years and found only one with five yolks. Double yolks are common, he said, but triple yolks showed up only once in each 100,000 eggs. And in one billion eggs there were just 3
