For Parents Only "STAR GAZING"

By Nancy Cleaver

Star gazing is as old as mankind. It is a hobby which fascinates a child and never loses its charm with the passing years.

A large round cookie tin can be converted into a splendid star map by painting it a dark blue. Then trace a star map, and using nails of three sizes, punch holes, big one for the First Magnitude stars, medium sized one for the Second Magnitude stars, and the smallest holes for the lesser ones.

An outline of the constellations and their names can be marked with luminous paint. Place a flat flashlight, facing upward, inside the tin, put on the cover and you have a very special star map of your own making.

If amateur photography is a favorite hobby, why not try a fast film of the path of the stars on some clear moonless night? A circular tube cardboard lens hood two or three inches long will keep out stray light and protect the negative from dew marks even if it does limit the field. A tripod camera can be pointed to the North Star, or a box camera supported on a level chair, and the film given a time exposure of several hours.

Star study can be carried on in any season. Children and older boys and girls, too, love stories on action and adventure. Every race which ever lived has its own legends about the mighty figures which people the night sky.

Observatories are stationed in definite places and are usually open to the public at stated times. A visit to a Planetarium, like the one in Chicago, is indeed a "high occasion," a glimpse into the wonder and the majesty of the night skies.

Simple star maps are inexpensive and not too difficult to follow. The little booklet "An Easy Pocket Star Guide for Beginners" by H. R. Kingston is

LAFF OF THE WEEK

"Okay, now let's hear your rendition of 'Good Night, Ladies!'"

EDITORS OF LONG STANDING HONORED

Vancouver. — Three pioneer weekly newspaper editors whose combined journalism careers total 170 years were honored here with special awards at the annual meeting of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association.

The three editors, Hugh Savage of The Cowichan (B.C.) Leader, Fred J. Macpherson of The Bridgewater (N.S.) Bulletin and L. Omer Perrier of The St. Jean (Que.) Le Canada Francais were awarded honorary life memberships in the C.W.N.A. in recognition of long and distinguished newspaper careers.

Between them, the veteran newspapermen have run a gamut of accomplishments — soldier, sailor, miner, explorer, musician, language scholar and pioneer printer.

Mr. Savage started his news paper career 55 years ago as a reporter for The Vancouver Province and assumed his present post as editor of The Cowichan Leader in 1914. He is a former president of the C. W. N. A. Mr. Savage twice represented Canadian weekly newspapers abroad at Imperial Press Conferences. He was a director of the original Canadian Press Association and was elected as an Independent M.L.A. in B.C. in 1913.

Mr. Perrier has made a life-long career with his newspaper, Le Canada Francais. Starting with the weekly when he was 21, he was elected a director in 1917. He is past-president of the French-Language Weeklies Association of Canada. Mr. Perrier was pro-Mayor of St. Jean in 1940.

A veteran of 65 years' experience, Mr. Macpherson's first job was as an apprentice printer in Stellarton, N.S. Early in his career he worked with weekly newspapers across Nova Scotia. In 1932 he purchased The Bridgewater Bulletin.

Awards Made at Newspaper Con.

The Brampton Conservator was awarded the "Oscar" of weekly newspaper publishing in Vancouver at the annual meeting of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association.

The Conservator was voted the best all-round newspaper in its class — large weekly newspapers with a circulation of at least 3,000 — and was awarded the Mason Trophy.

Second and third places were claimed by The Midland Free Press Herald and The Yorkton (Sask.) Enterprise.

An award for the best editorial page in the over-3,000 circulation class was won by The Swift Current (Sask.) Sun. Runners-up were The Newmarket Era & Express; second, and The Tillsonburg News; and The Yorkton (Sask.) Enterprise, both tied for third place.

The Brampton Conservator also won first honors in the best front page competition. Second and third were The Port Credit Weekly and The Midland Free Press Herald.

In another division of the competitions, The Oakville Trafalgar Journal was selected as the most outstanding weekly newspaper in Canada with a circulation of more than 2,000. Close contenders were The Courtenay (B.C.) Comox District Free Press and The Aurora Banner. Winners of the best editorial page competition were: first, The Oakville Trafalgar Journal; second, The Melville (Sask.) Advance; third, The Brampton Peel Gazette. Leaders in the competition for the most outstanding front page in the class were: first, The Courtenay (B.C.) Comox District Free Press; second, The Oakville Trafalgar Journal; third, The Mission City (B.C.) Fraser Valley Record.
