DEEP-FROZEN GOOSE

THERE'S ONE GOOSE near Liberal, Kan., who knows what it feels like to be locked in a deep freeze. He was paddling across a small lake with other members of a flock and fell behind. He decided to rest for awhile, but, like many humans just after dinner, he dropped off to sleep. When he woke up, an arctic blast had frozen the lake solid with nine-below-zero temperatures. Undersheriff Zed Coffey had to don a pair of hip boots and use a four-by-four to batter his way to rescue of that silly goose.

Other members of flock of tame geese watch helplessly as one is frozen in the lake.

THESE FIREMEN START A FIRE—Kids around Williamsport, Md., recently got the word that a fire was going to break out at an old barn and they rushed to the spot (left). They knew that the local fire department was going to burn the building down as part of an exercise. They put out various types of blazes in the barn that was going to be dismantled anyway. Once exercises were over, they let it burn to the foundation.
