Mr. Howe has imposed closure on parliament on the question of presenting the company with a loan of some $80 million to enable it to build the first section of the gas pipeline from 'Alberta to Winnipeg. This company has fumbled with its priorities for five years and now the government is coming to its rescue. Originally there were three alternative methods proposed for getting the natural gas pipeline built from Alberta to eastern Canada. The first was to back Trans-Canada with government financial support; the second was to turn the problem over to some other company, and the for the marriage, a double ring third was for the government ceremony, of Phyllis Kathleen, to take over the project entirely rather than approach it piece-Beelby, to Murray Ralph, son of meal, which could be the result of the Trans-Canada plan.
