A world traveller and president of the Associated Country Women of the World, Mrs. Alice M. Berry, O.B.E., J.P., will be the chief speaker at the Rally of York County Women's Institute, to be held June 22, in Dalziel Park, 5th concession, Vaughan, one mile south of Edgely.

branch in Queensland, took an active part in the work of the Red Cross, was president of the Queensland Bush Children's Health Scheme (an organization which runs holiday homes for children where they are given medical, dental and optical attention). Work among crippled children receives her particular attention and she takes a keen interest in the assimilation of new Australians and the education of country children.

During her term of office as president of the ACWW, she travelled to New Zealand, U.S.A., Canada, Lebanon, Malaysia, Ceylon, Ireland, Pakistan, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands, Switzerland and Germany.

Packer Offers to Discontinue Under The Table Payments

Insufficient supplies of hogs on the open market have resulted in one of Ontario's processing plants offering to pay higher hog prices and to discontinue their under-the-table payments to drovers, if the Ontario Hog Producers' Cooperative can meet their hog requirements.

Charles McInnis, president of the Ontario Hog Producers' Association, in announcing the offer from an Ontario packer, said that another packer in Ontario is currently entertaining a similar offer.

The hog organization President said that it was regrettable that despite the Hog Co-operative's present opportunity to secure better province-wide prices if more hogs were shipped to the open market, still there is a short supply in that market.

"Under the present system of our established stockyards at Toronto, Kitchener, Stratford, London and Windsor, plus the hogs directed through our County assembly points, we have a much larger number of hogs out in the open for competitive bidding than we have had for the past ten years. We still need greater numbers if we are to meet the requirements of processors in undersupplied areas. These processors are willing to pay higher prices to get their supplies," stated Mr. McInnis.

Mr. McInnis charged that because of a maze of agreements and general understandings involving under-the-table payments from certain large packers, drovers were ignoring the higher prices which Ontario hog producers could secure through their Co-operative Marketing Agency on the open market. With these incentives, drovers in their own interests, and ignoring the interests of producers, are delivering hogs direct to processor plants.

"On behalf of Jake Kohler, our Hog Co-operative manager," Mr. McInnis said, "I urge all

The Old-Timer Gormley Blue Bells Were Popular Football Team

On the McKuen farm, lot 10, the same old barn still stands. The late Austin Yake was threshing there and we moved the machine from one floor to the other and from the time the belt was thrown off till it was put on and the machine was threshing again, it was eleven minutes. Some are still living who were there that day — Eddie Cooney and Milton Cook of Schomberg, employed at the Specialty works at Newmarket, who is also one of the valued members of the Newmarket Fire Brigade.

When I was in North Dakota around Bathgate or Cavalier, I worked on Mr. Restimere's outfit, threshing stacks. We used to move from one stack to the other and be threshing in three to four minutes. Every man had his job. Mine was to roll up the drive belt when the machine was being moved, and unroll it again. We started to thresh at six o'clock in the morning and worked till nearly dark — no 8-hour day in those days. However, there was an abundance to eat; a real good lunch was supplied in the middle of the forenoon and also in the afternoon and time off to eat it.

The same farm, Lot 8, that John Brown owned and farmed was owned by George Lemon, John's father-in-law. I well remember when Eli Sisler worked that farm. There were three boys, Frank, Aylmer and Melville. I doubt if any of them are alive, but the daughter Ethel who married her school teacher, James Lawson, is alive yet and resides in Toronto. She was in the same class at school along with the late Rilla Baker who became George Cook's wife, and Lawson was the teacher at that time.

Frank Hancock worked that place after Mr. Sisler. His wife was a sister of Mrs. Albert John Allen who owned the house where Henry Burnett now lives. Those ladies' maiden name was Sonley and they resided on the highway between Whitby and Brooklin. All the people around that vicinity would remember Leo Cook. He was a son of the drover Samuel and also had a brother Dean who is now in Winnipeg. I helped move back grain with Leo in the same barn that is still on the old Sonley farm. I well remember, and have heard my older brother and sisters tell of the good garden parties held on both farms, Lots 8 and 9.

I heard my brother discuss a football match along with some others who were there when the old Gormley Blue Bells team played against Bethesda in the field east of where that house now stands. According to what they said, it was some game! We were drawing in turnpits from this same field one Thanksgiving day—the late George Lemon and the late John Davis—and I'll never forget the bawling out that Mr. Davis gave me that afternoon. He finished up by telling me that he never thought my father would raise a fool like me. Well, it all blew over and we were soon good friends again.

This man Davis was a real good carpenter—one of the best—and I know of two or three dozen houses that he built in the township of Whitchurch and Markham, including that wonderful house on the farm now belonging to Roy Moyer. He is buried in Lemonville graveyard, with his good wife, and his monument stands up as plumb as his houses. His wife was a sister of Alex Pingle of Unionville. There were four girls or more. The late Art Davidson's mother, late George Lemon's wife, and
