

Here is the front of the present modernized Stouffer's Hardware as it appeared better than sixty years ago. A long-established hardware business, operated at that time by Fred Silvester. The canopy which covers the front of the store and what is now the Carload Groceries, was removed only a few years ago. Oldsters will recall the hitching posts and mud road. Now turn to Page ten for a look at the same building as it appears today.

Despite the torrential rains, big shopping crowds were in town both Friday evening and all day Saturday. This shopping crowd plus the continuous line of northward-bound holiday travellers made for considerable congestion along Main Street. The rain drove many off the street and a large crowd, numbering well up in the hundreds found their way to the Arena for the opening Wrestling Show. Hydro was interrupted for a short time on Saturday afternoon when falling trees and branches struck power lines. The rain stopped at noon and the winds took over, giving local residents a reminder of Hurricane Hazel and the disastrous storm which struck the southern States on Thursday.

Mrs. Copeman, R.R. 2, Stouffville, sends us an interesting clipping from a daily news paper in London, England, which berates tourists who attempt to disturb the famous Guardsmen at the Tower of London. Mrs. Copeman states that her eldest son joined the Cold Stream Guards; his father's regiment, at the age of fifteen, as a drummer boy. He was Senior Drummer when he met his death while on duty at the Guards' Chapel, Wellington Barracks. Mrs. Copeman asks if the many visitors who travel to England today, realize the strain put on these sentries. Picture shows a Canadian tourist attempting to put his arm around one of the Guards to have his picture taken, much to the discomfort of the Guardsman who can do nothing to protect himself, as there is no policeman on duty near these posts.
