

TCA ANNOUNCES SEATING PLAN ON DC-8 JETLINER

When Trans-Canada Air Lines puts its six DC-8 Jetliners in service in 1960, each aircraft will accommodate 127 passengers—28 First Class and 99 Economy. Each cabin will have its own double galley, washrooms (with flushing toilets for the first time in any TCA airplane), cloakrooms, inter-communications and public address systems and music in flight. The forward part of the aircraft will contain a lounge accommodating eight passengers. There will be four doors, two for passenger loading and two for aircraft servicing. The cargo compartment will hold five tons. The huge Jetliners will go into service on TCA's transcontinental and trans-Atlantic routes, cutting flying time almost in half.

Safe Boating Tips For More Fun Afloat

Did you know that all boats—including canoes, rowboats and sailboats, must carry lights on the water after dark? Find out what the regulation lights are for your craft. Never take a boat out at night unless it has the proper lights required by law. Play safe for more fun afloat.

Water skiing is lots of fun. But remember, there must be two people in the boat—one to drive the boat and the other to watch the skier. Water skiers, especially beginners, should wear life jackets. Play safe for more fun afloat.

Make sure that your boat carries the safety equipment required by law. This includes a government-approved life jacket or cushion for each person aboard, two paddles or oars with oarlocks, a manually operated bailer or pump, and lights. Play safe for more fun afloat.

Learn the rules of the road. Make sure you know what to do when meeting or passing another boat or when approaching a sailboat or canoe. Play safe for more fun afloat.

Sitting in front of a 35 or 50 h.p. motor is a wonderful form of summer fun. But remember, hotrodding on the water is just as dangerous as it is on the highway. Play safe for more fun afloat.

You're a lucky guy if you own a high-speed outboard runabout. But remember that the canoe, rowboat and sailboat have equal rights on Canada's waterways. Slow down when passing other boats or docks where boats are moored. Play safe for more fun afloat.

Here's a tip to weekend skippers. Don't overpower your boat. Many Canadian-built boats carry a Department of Transport plate showing recommended power and load. Look for this plate when buying a Canadian made boat.

A good skipper always watches the weather. When a storm threatens, head for the closest safe anchorage. If a storm overtakes you on the lake, stay low, throttle down, and head into the waves. Play safe for more fun afloat.

Boating is fun, but remember that swimmers have equal rights on Canada's waterways. Don't fool around near swimming areas. Approach a dock with care and at low speed. Play safe for more fun afloat.

The weekend skipper is responsible for the safety of his passengers. Never overload your boat. If you must change positions, first slow down and put the motor in neutral gear. Play safe for more fun afloat.

Hog Producers Today are Pioneers in Marketing

"Three things Canadian farmers today have always set great store in, just as their pioneer forefathers did, are a sense of independence, a feeling of freedom and a measure of security," says Charles W. McInnis, president of the Ontario Hog Producers' Association.

"The maintenance of these rights has been an important factor in almost all farm organizations, just as it has in Canadian national life. In the face of our modern trend to pressure groups, each promoting its own welfare, such a policy has been doubly important in guiding the policies of the Ontario Hog Producers' Association," Mr. McInnis continues.

"In keeping hogs under producer control until sold, we believe we are doing everything possible to protect the Ontario farmers' independence from control by outside interests," Mr. McInnis says. "The farmer now has the opportunity to decide, through his salesman, whether hogs will be sold at the price offered or not. He also can decide through the organization, under what conditions hogs will be handled and offered for sale."

"The Ontario farmer today has the freedom to decide how many hogs he will raise, how he will sell them, and where he will sell them," says the hog producer president.

"This independence and freedom has given Ontario hog producers newfound security. By introducing producer bargaining rights in the market, it contributes toward the producer receiving more money for his efforts. Through salesmanship he has received on the average better prices during 1958 for his product. The present marketing system has proven highly efficient and is returning more money to the producer, thus offering greater security for the farmer and his family.

"In unity there is strength, and strength gives security. The present system of planned, orderly marketing has given hog producers a new voice in the market, and newfound security for their families," Mr. McInnis says.

Another point hog producers stress as voting day approaches, includes the fact that today's farming must be modern in its marketing approach as well as in production. Present day knowledge enables producers to do a much better job of producing pork. But because of market complexities Ontario farmers have not kept abreast of changing needs. The present intelligent marketing plan offers a basis for long term planning such as never existed before since it allows farmers to work together to solve their mutual problems.

Getting hogs out on the open market where they can be sold to the highest bidder enables the seller and buyer to meet on equal terms. When hogs are sold through a single sales office the salesmen know as much about the market and the demand as do the buyers. This could not be true when 40,000 individuals all sold their product to a handful of buyers. In spite of this centralization, the association points out, the plan is democratically controlled. Directors are elected for one year terms, and over-all policy is constantly adjusted to the wishes of the majority.

own welfare, such a policy has been doubly important in guiding the policies of the Ontario Hog Producers' Association," Mr. McInnis continues.

"The period of waiting and suspense between strikes or bites helps to make the big moment of the catch even more enjoyable. And, this is good. If a fisherman caught his limit every time he went out, he would soon turn to a sport that offered a bit more of a challenge.

"The period of waiting and suspense between strikes or bites helps to make the big moment of the catch even more enjoyable. And, this is good. If a fisherman caught his limit every time he went out, he would soon turn to a sport that offered a bit more of a challenge.

"Too much waiting between bites makes fishing boring for the beginning fisherman. He wants action, and needs it to get acquainted with the thrills of the sport. A beginner should start with the pan fish—sunfish, crappie, bluegill, and shiner. While these fish will take artificial lures, the angler is more sure of a catch if he uses worms or grubs for bait.

Pan fish are often caught quite easily around boat docks and piers, tree stumps, logs and other such places which provide them with shelter and overhead protection.

Depending upon water temperature, available cover, and the deepness of the lake or stream, pan fish may be caught at varying depths. A bit of experimenting will help locate them.

"The present working method is nearing the hoped for goal of independence, freedom and security for which it was originally designed by the farm leaders of Ontario," concludes Mr. McInnis.

THE WORLD OUTDOORS

By Mike Bennett

"Getting off to a good start makes any task seem well worth the effort. And, where the sport of fishing is concerned, nothing will make a devoted angler any quicker than a few catches of fish.

"Fishing is not always productive. And, this is good. If a fisherman caught his limit every time he went out, he would soon turn to a sport that offered a bit more of a challenge.
