

News of the World in Pictures

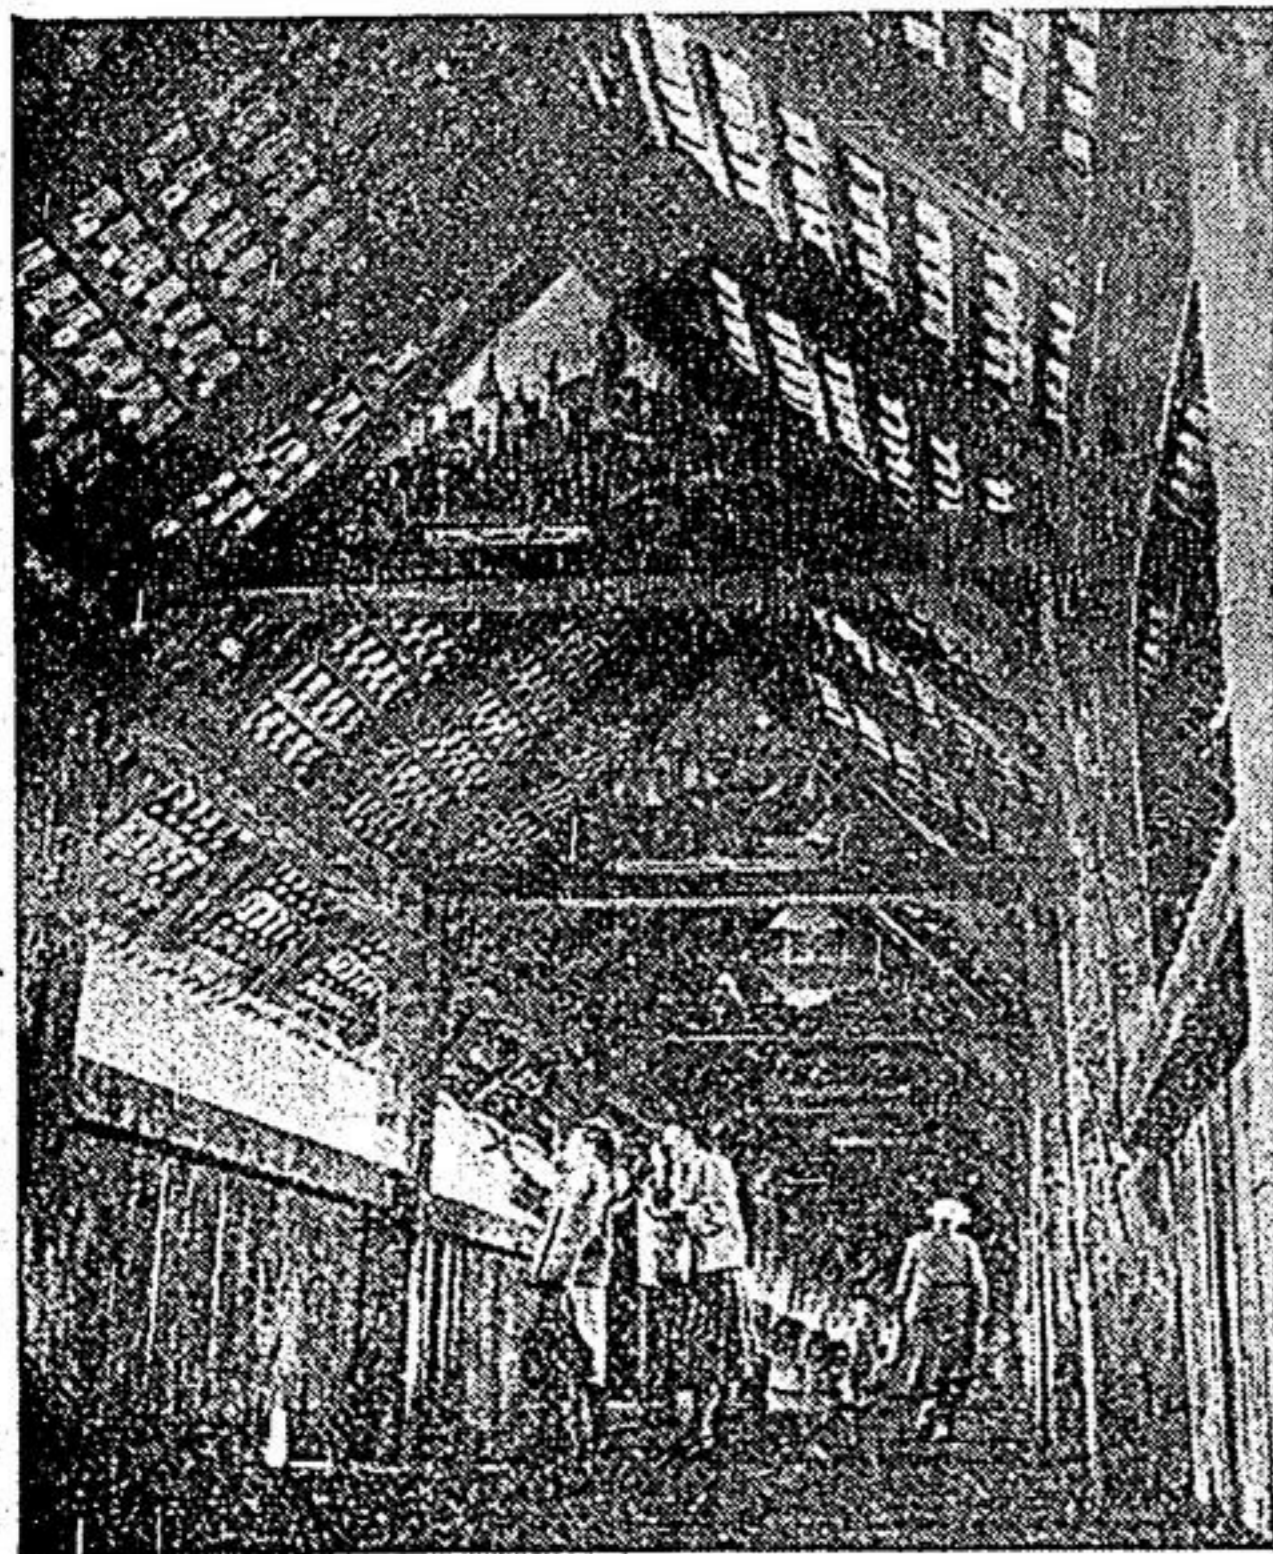

COMING BACK—The battered French town of Frejus is just beginning to return from the deadly flood waters that smashed the town. Prefabricated huts are going up all over town.

JUMP TUNESMITHS—Really flipping over their "big sound," French bandleader Jack Dieval and musicians whip up a number for Paris concert.

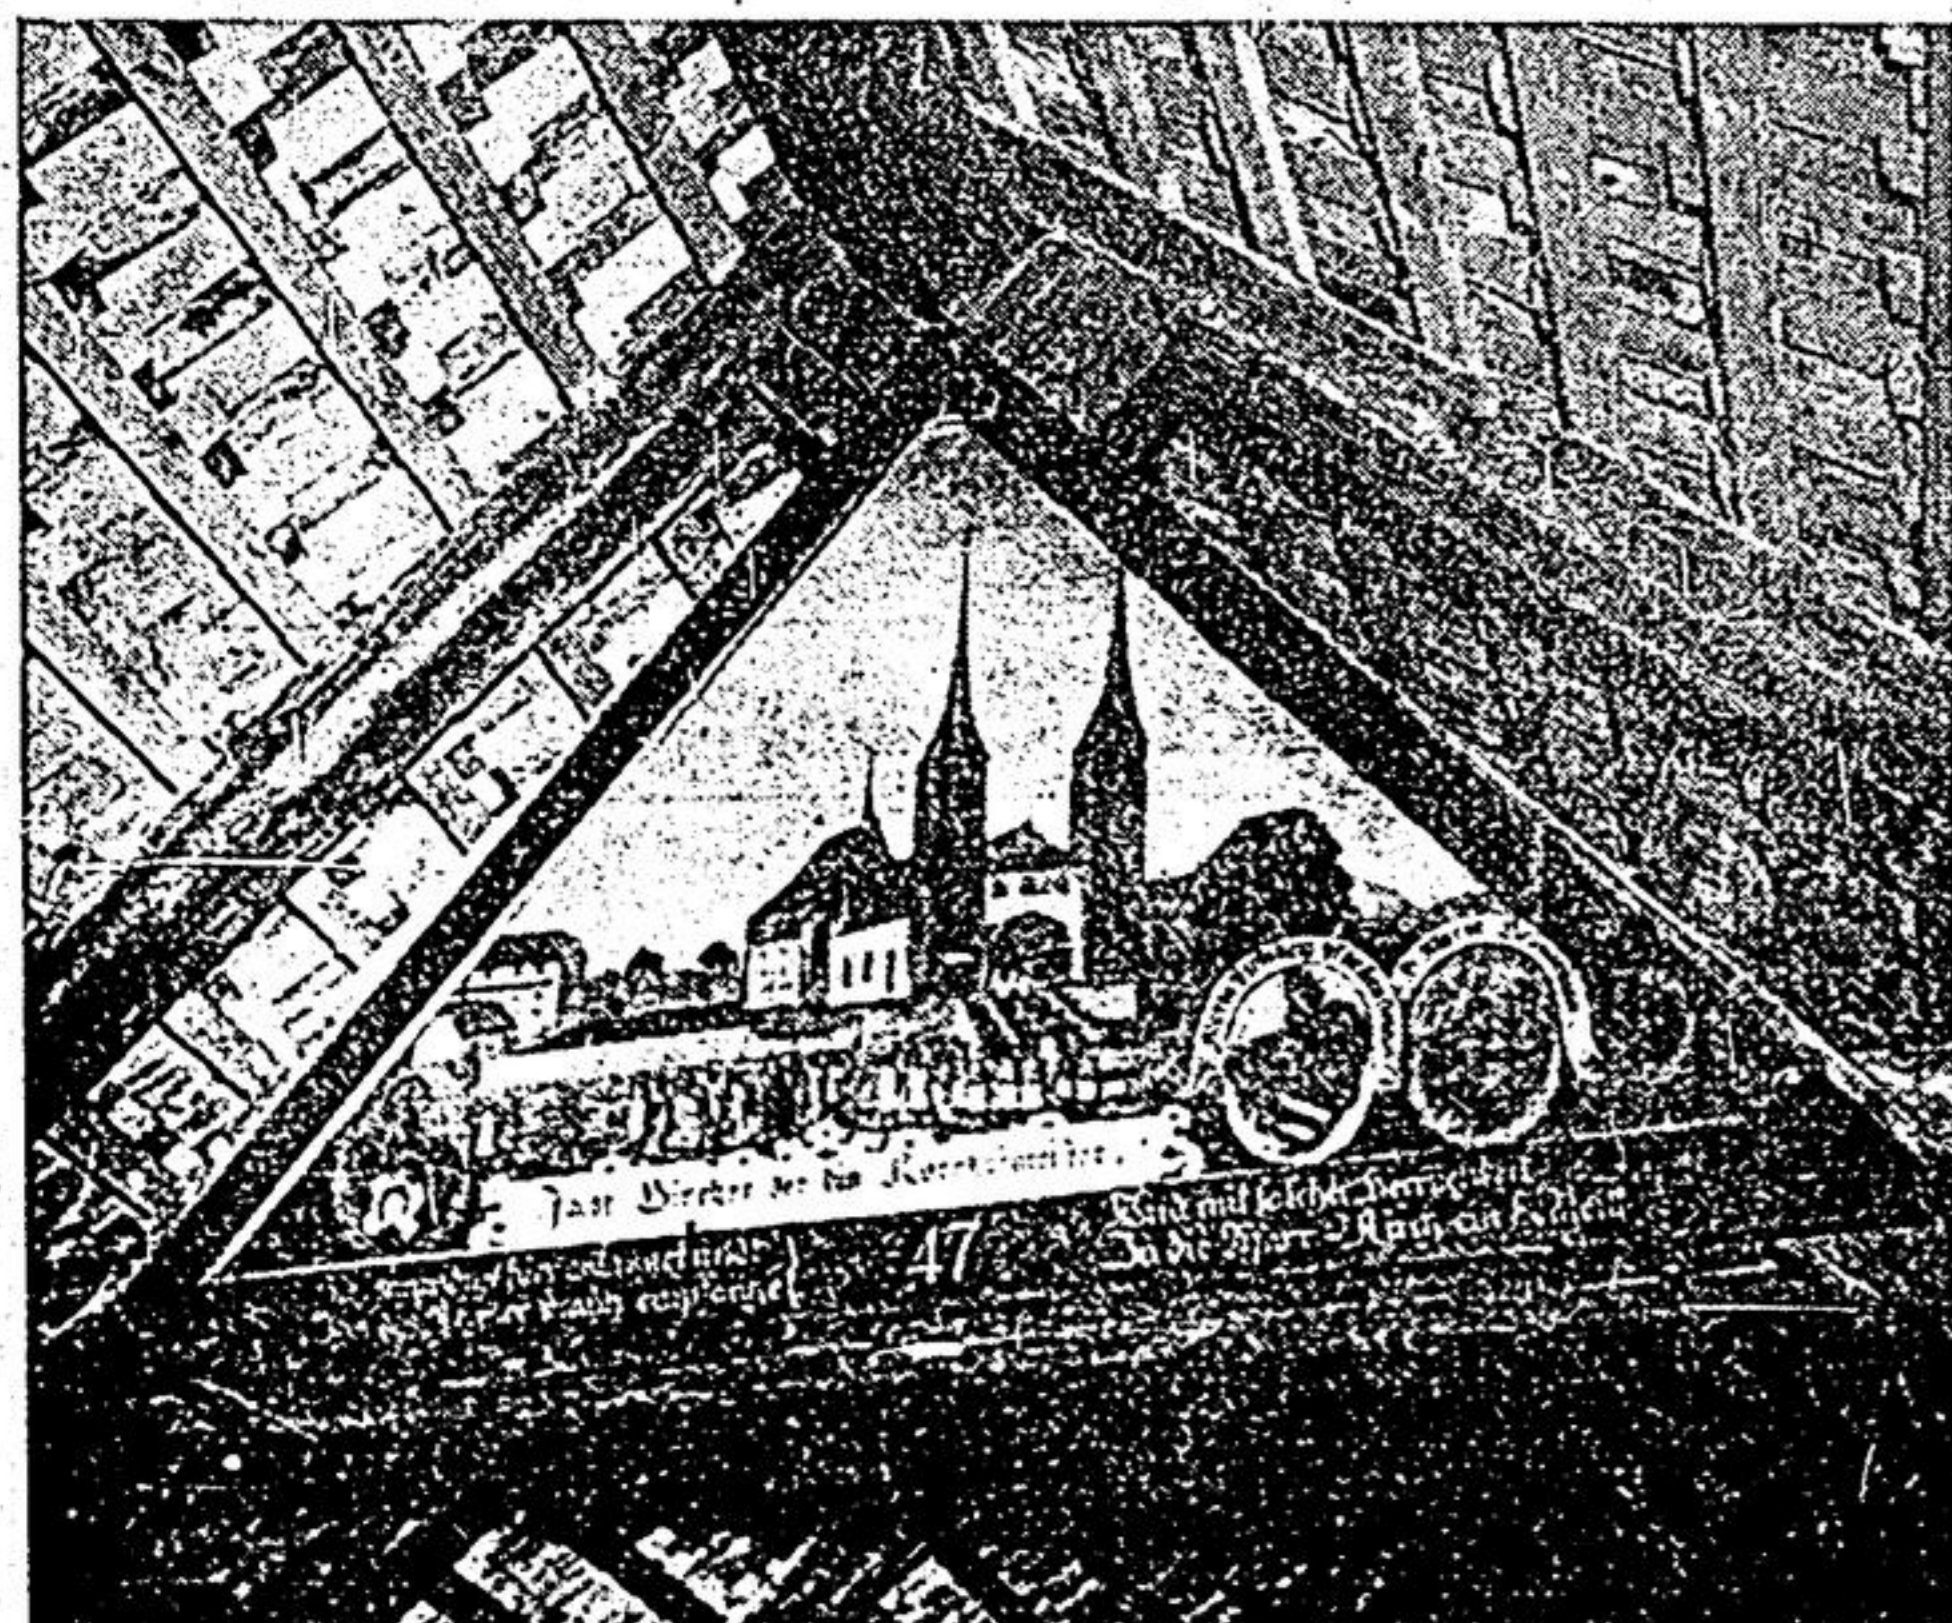

Water tower at left was once a prison. Now it houses Swiss Artillery club.

Visitors look out over the river from bridge.

AN ARTY BRIDGE

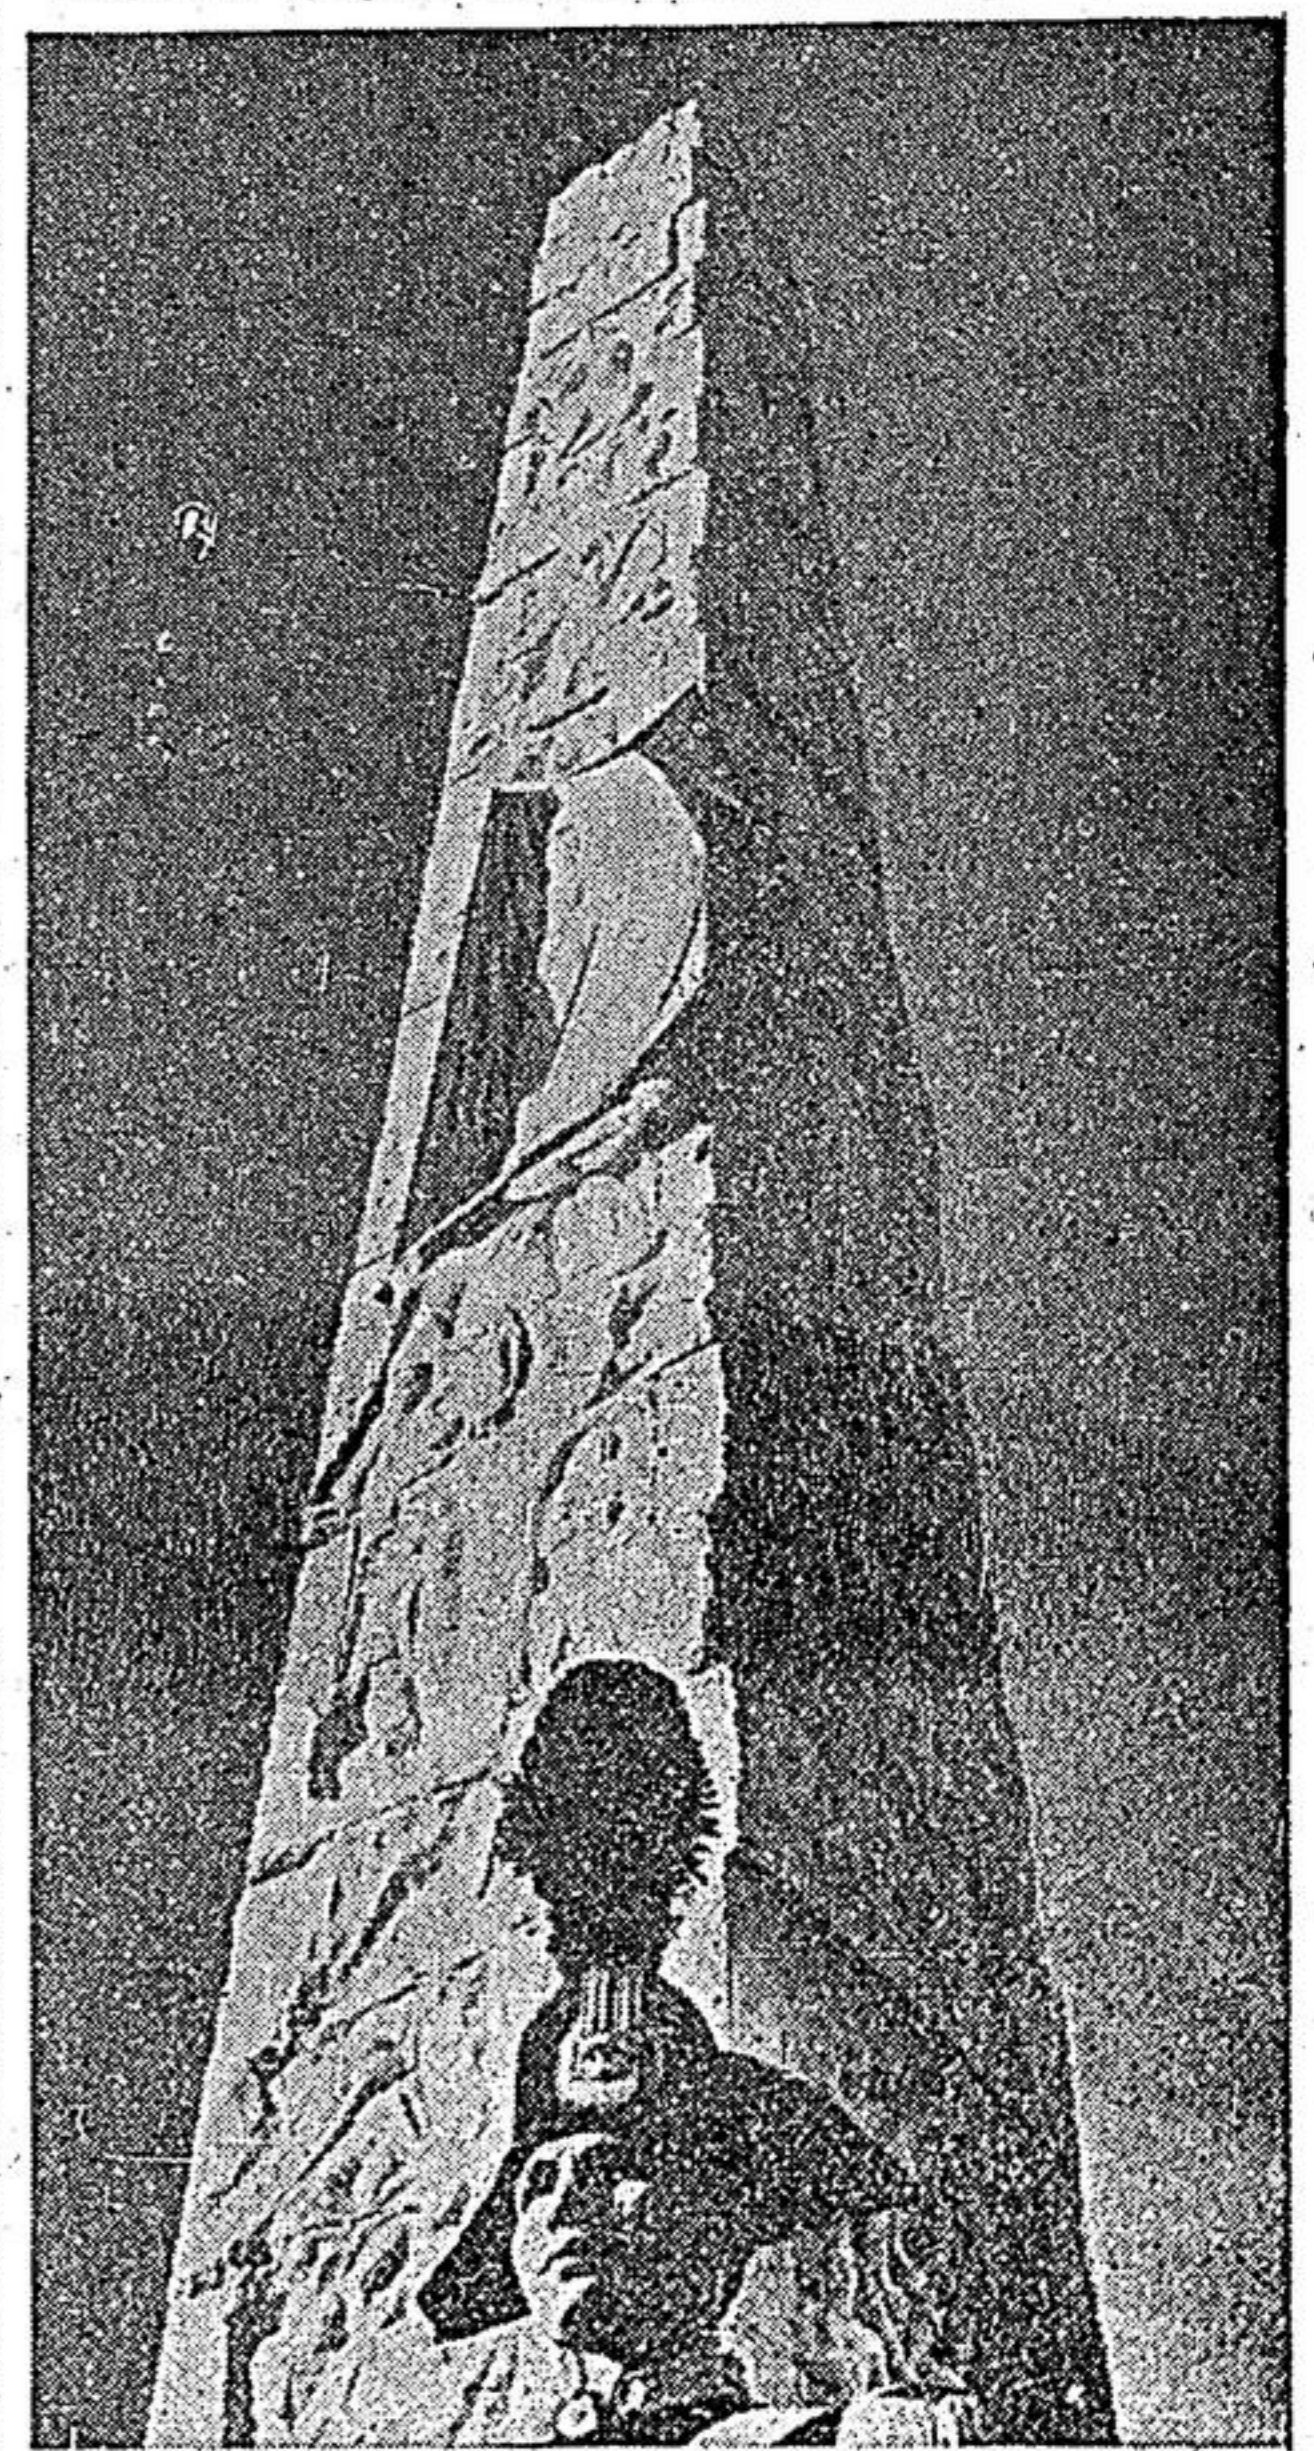

SPANNING the past, a covered bridge in Lucerne, Switzerland, serves as an art gallery with paintings of the nation's past. The bridge, which extends over the Reuss river, was constructed in 1333. At each of the bridge's 50 wooden arches are triangular paintings depicting the early growth of Switzerland. The bridge and the artworks, which were painted in the early 17th century, are under the protection of the Municipal museum of Lucerne. Except during occasional restoration work, the paintings remain in place all year around, no matter what the weather. Pedestrians get the feeling they are inside a museum as they stroll across. Periodic work keeps the paintings in top condition.

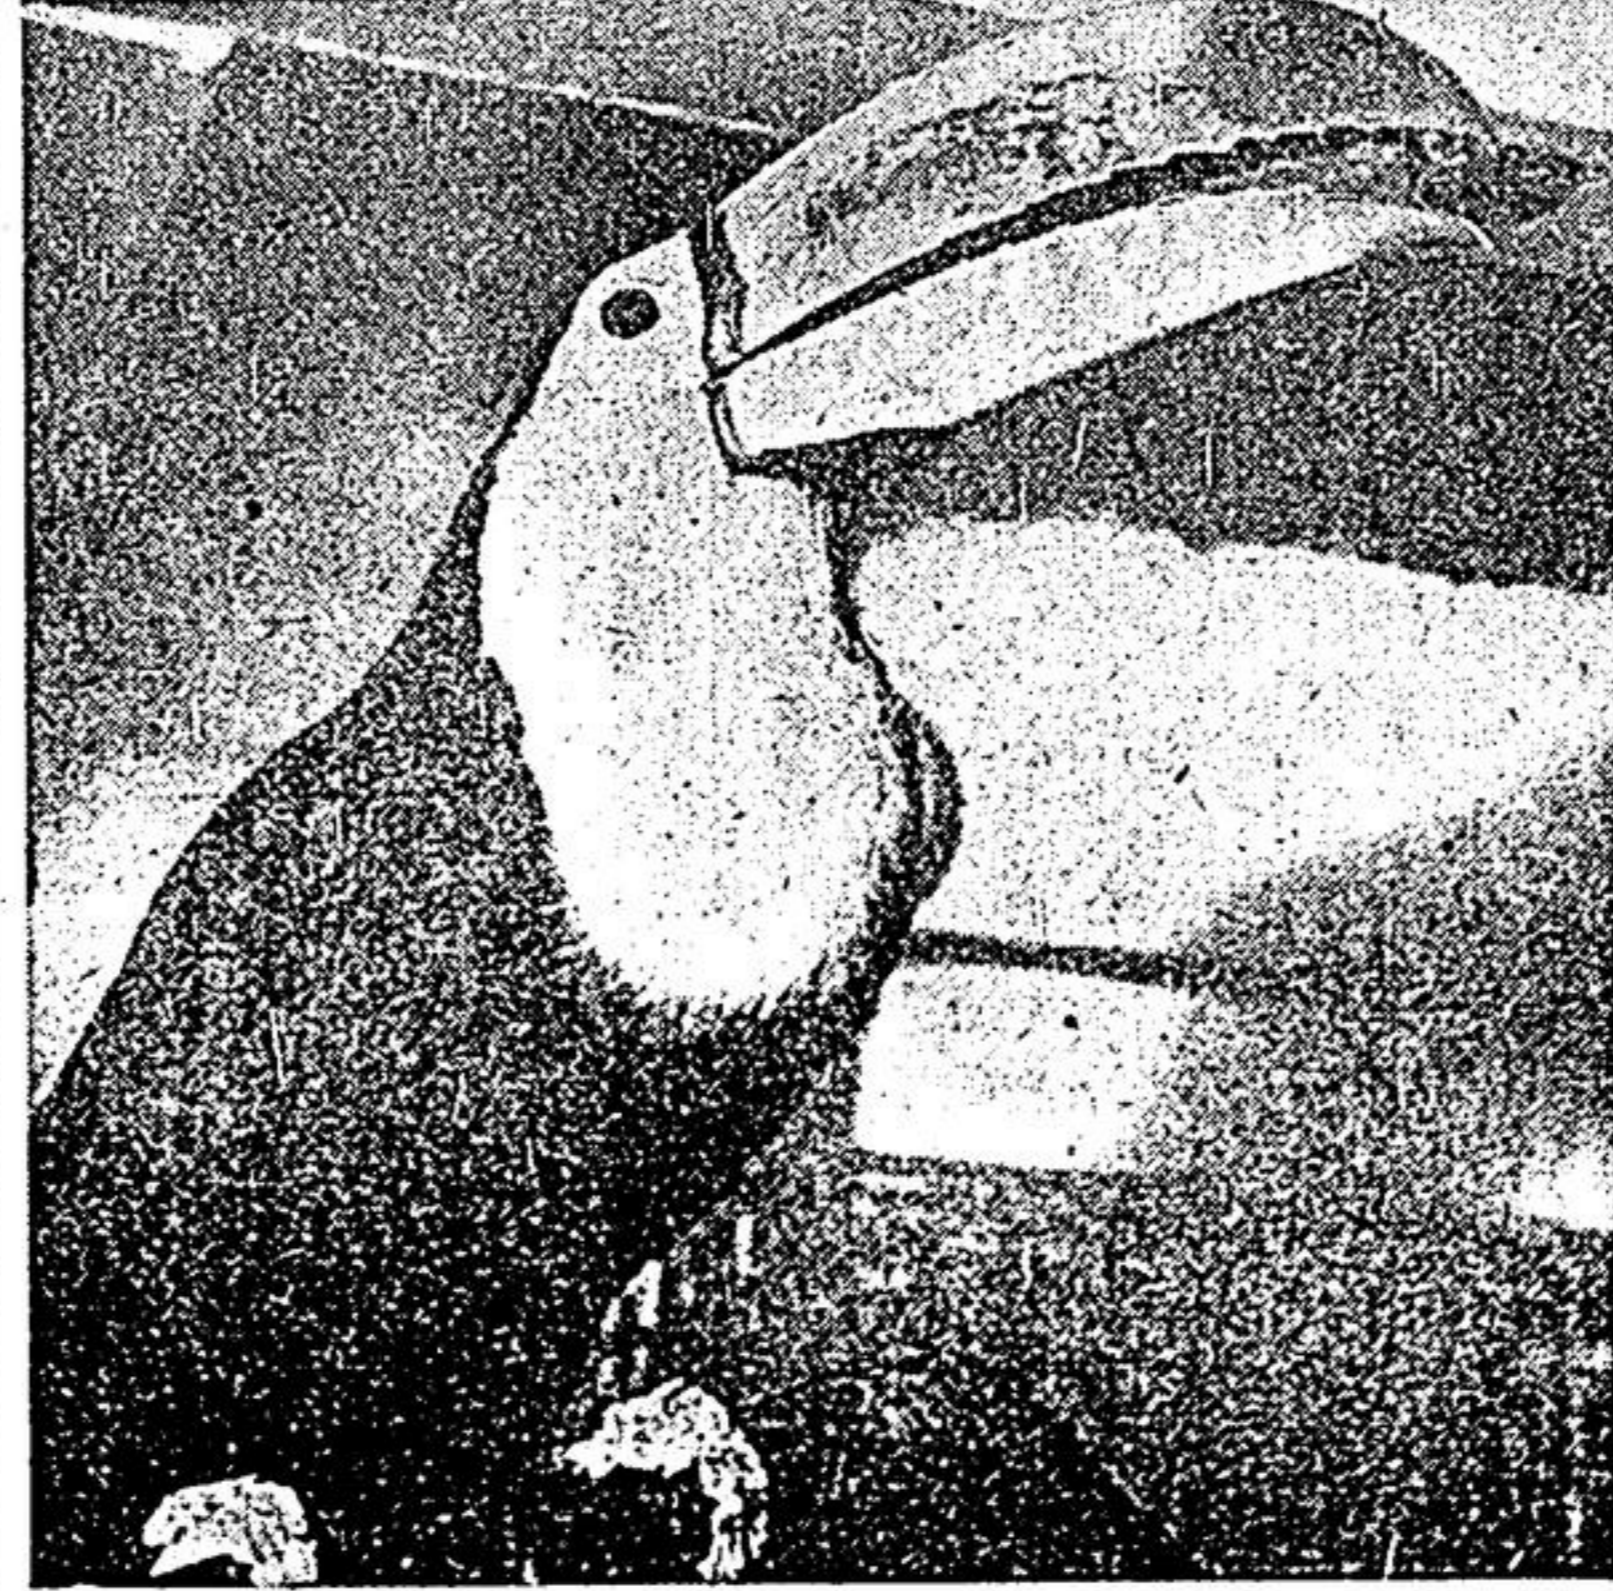

Despite their continued outdoor exposure, the paintings are in excellent shape. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

HOPING FOR A 'NO SALE'—Although the sign proclaims that four-year-old Jennifer Hogg is selling some of her kittens on her Dorking, England, farm, her heart isn't in it.

ETERNAL MONUMENT—A carabinieri stands before a striking memorial column to inventor Guglielmo Marconi in Rome. The lofty pillar is adorned with handsomely-wrought bas-reliefs.

IT'S A LONG WAY DOWN—Judging by the length of his bill, this toucan will be hungry again by the time that tidbit reaches his stomach. This fugitive from South America is juggling a piece of apple in London zoo.

RECORDING SESSION—Pert Connie Francis tries out her professional singing voice on a coin-operated recording machine in New York while her date, Billy Donahue, listens in. Donahue, a former magazine photographer, is singing his way to popularity.