

News of the World in Pictures

Doug Walker and Bob Doty float in space cabin.

TV cameraman clammers up a flagpole for photo.

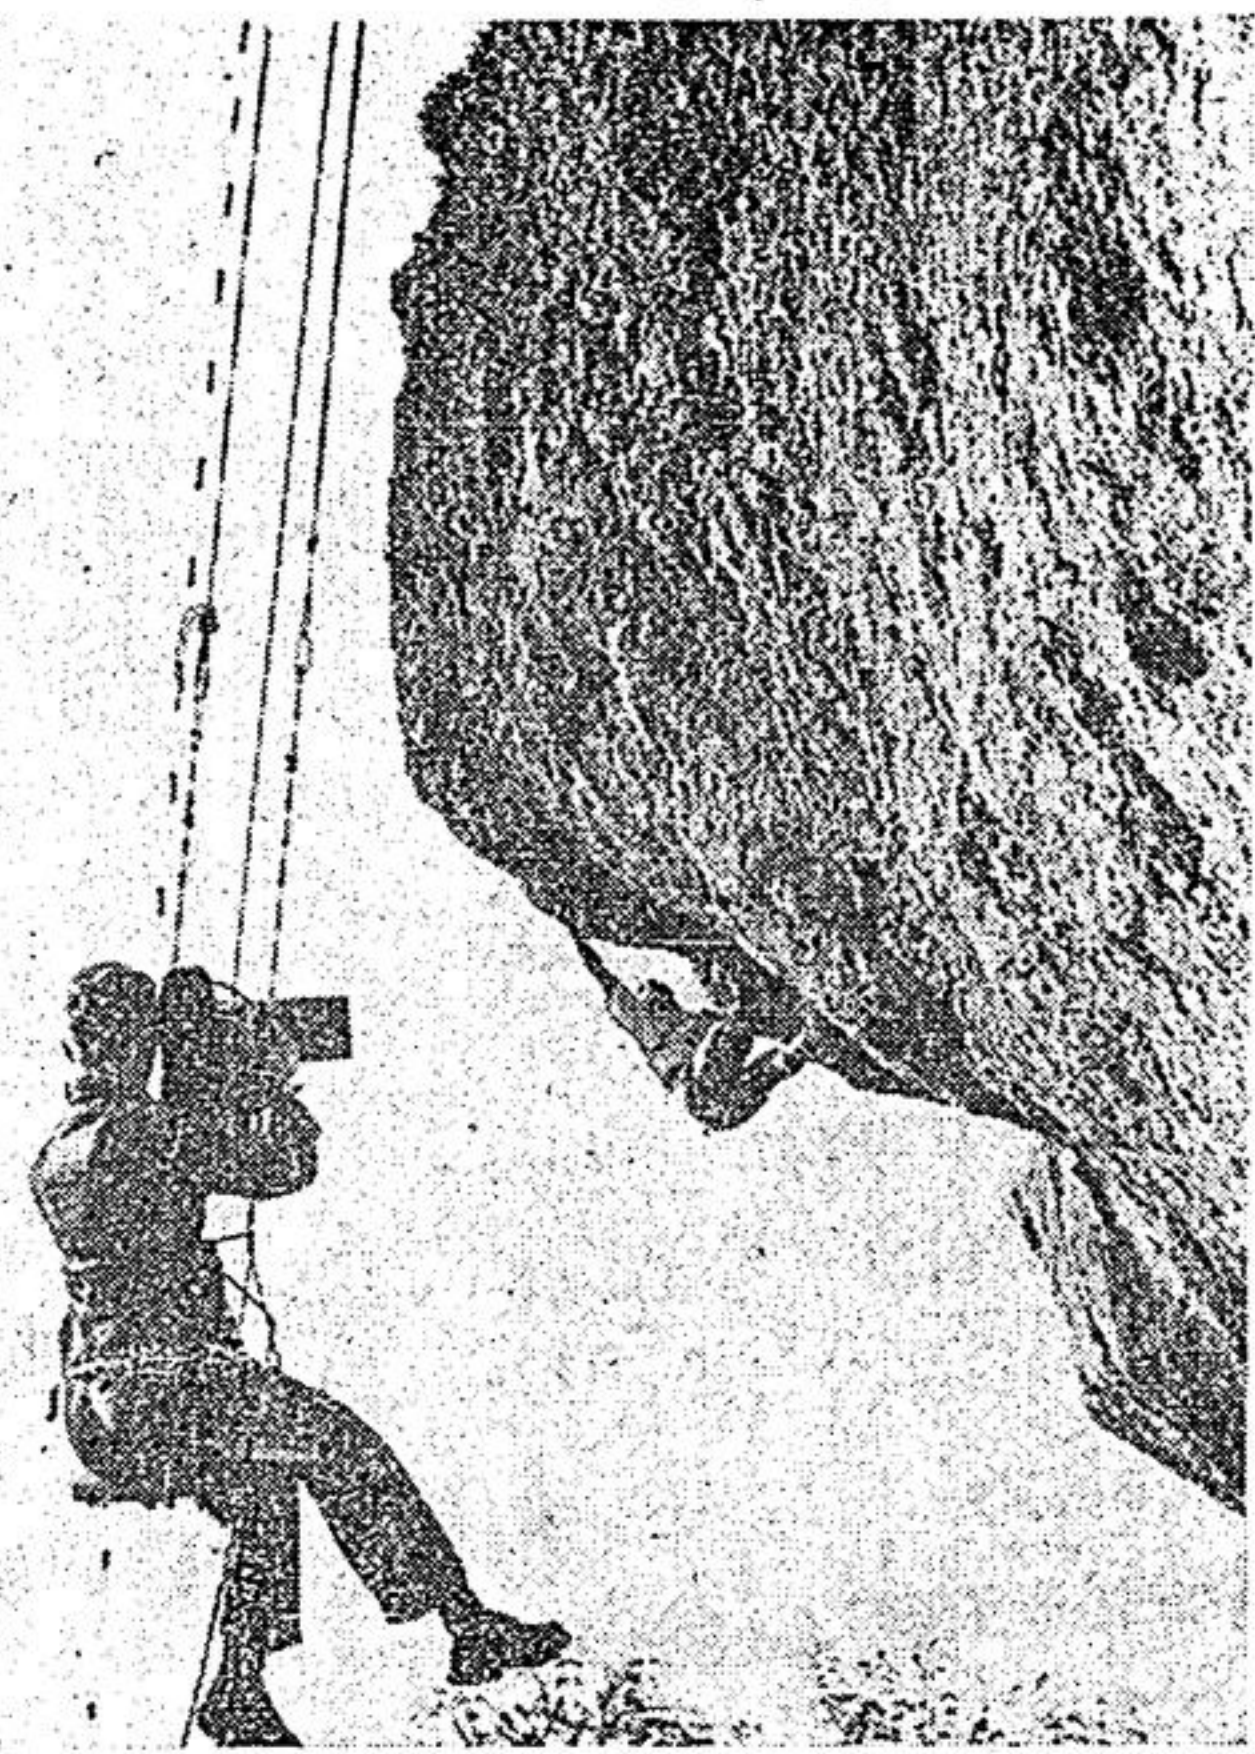

POLITICS IS THEIR PROFESSION—Three Kennedy brothers—Senator John F., Robert F., and Ted—break up a huddle in Hyannis Port, Mass., long enough to pose for cameramen. They are holding one of their conferences at summer home of the Democratic presidential nominee.

AIMING HIGH

PHOTOGRAPHERS—it can be argued—sometimes take a "flighty" attitude toward their job, as these photos show. They will use everything from stilts to planes to get pictures that are out of the ordinary. Cameraman Bob Doty (with Doug Walker) floated around in a space cabin in Dayton, O., while photographer M. Bastin dangled in a bosun's chair for his shot. British broadcaster Brian Johnston took his portable TV camera up a flagpole for his assignment. Another photographer with his head in the clouds is Mark Duffy, who covered a labor convention on stilts in Kansas City, Mo. Then there's the unidentified lensman who climbed into a Swiss carrier's basket to snap a camera-shy diplomat at a meeting in Geneva.

Stilts aid an upbeat angle to convention photo.

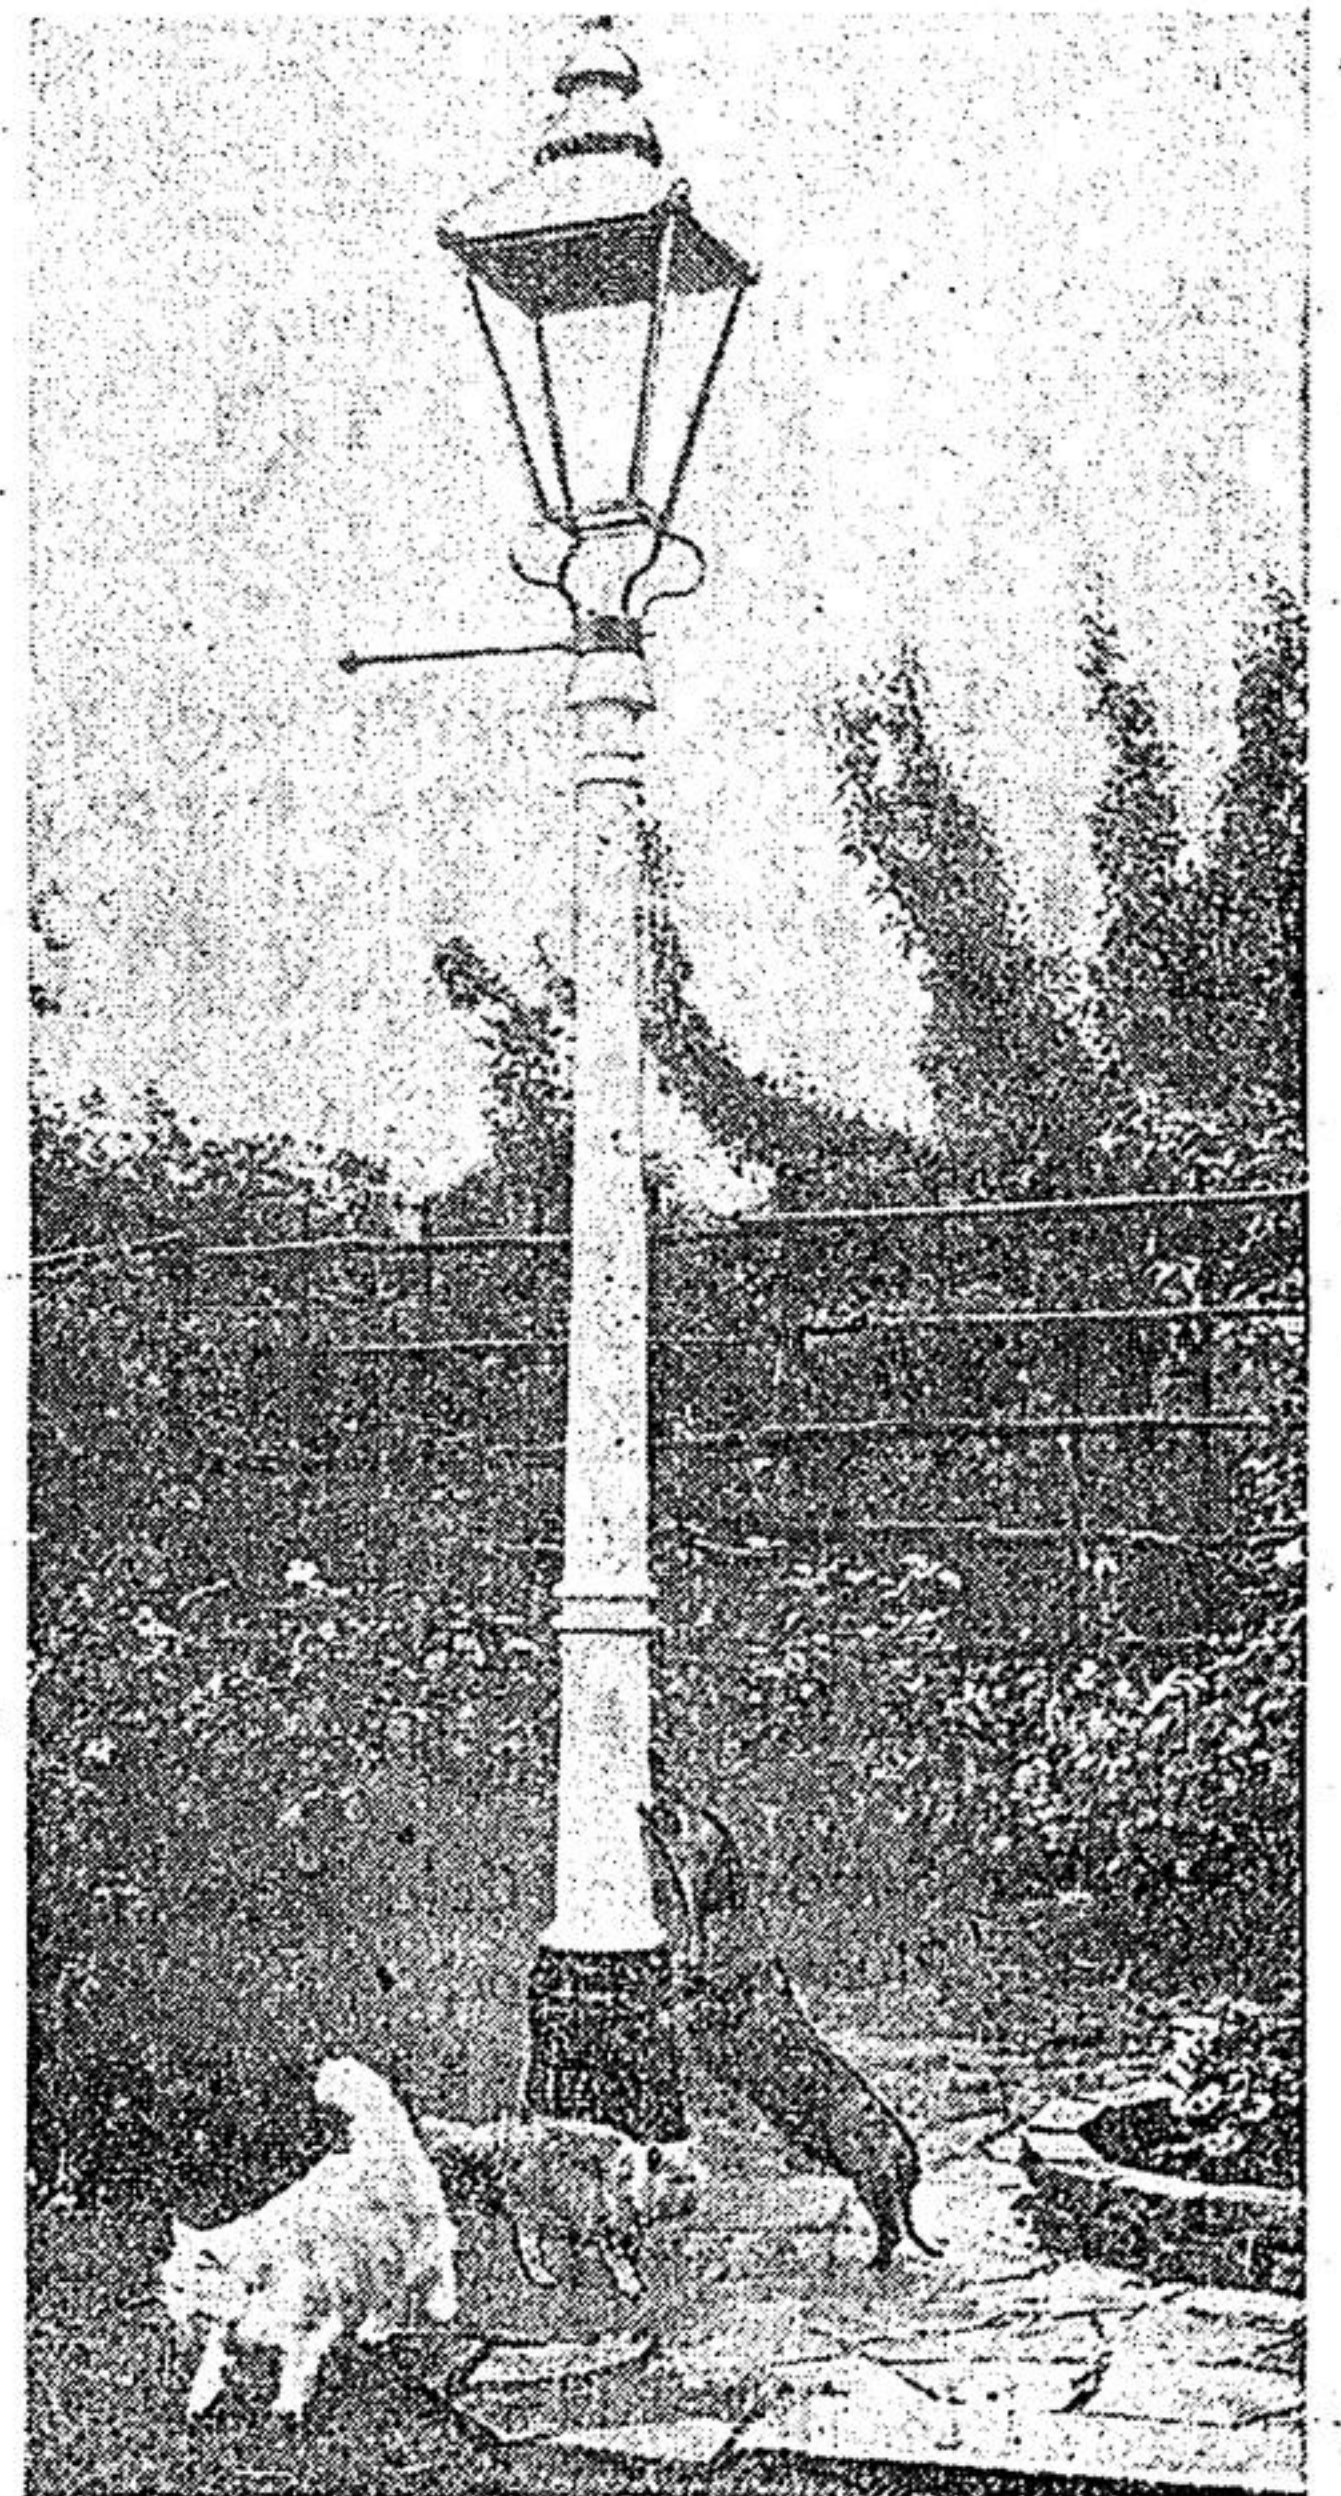

M. Bastin dangles to get a shot of J. Lecomte on a cliff.

A basket-carrying friend helps him get a difficult shot.

ON ENLISTMENT MISSION—Wearing an Air Force high altitude suit and carrying a helmet, Don Kimmel tries to promote enlistments of cadets in Middletown, N. Y.

TOP DOG—Liebchen, the dachshund, is the envy of other dogs as he chases cats from his own lamp post in Kingsbury, England. His owner bought it for him as a third birthday present.

HE HAS SOMETHING EXTRA—R. A. Vega is one "newsboy" who has his own special way of delivering newspapers on his route in Oakland, Calif. Vega saves himself miles of travel by means of his home-made "train."

FIREFIGHTERS FIGHT EACH OTHER—Firemen from Middleburg Heights and Strongsville, O., call this a "game," but it looks more like "cold war." Photographer Chet Wozney ran out of range a few seconds later.