County Bldg. Would Be In Whitby

If a new county administration building or court house is built, it will be in Whitby. On Wednesday, at a session of the Ontario County Council, the property committee was authorized to take an option on property for such a new building but only within the town of Whitby.

In May of this year, the property committee was asked by council to look for a suitable site for a new county administration building.

The committee reported on Tuesday but its report was amended to authorize the committee to take an option on suitable property in Whitby for either an administration building or court. Council has yet to decide whether to convert the present building to court room space or to administration offices. At present, both court and administration are in the same building.

The property committee's original report, which was later amended, stated:

"On May 26, 1960, you authorized the standing committee on county property to examine suitable sites in the County of Ontario for the erection of a county administrative building. Your committee has inspected sites in the Towns of Uxbridge and Whitby, the Village of Port Perry, the Townships of Reach, Uxbridge and Whitby.

"By the terms of reference we were restricted to the examination of suitable sites for a County administrative building. We would recommend that your committee be authorized to consider the advisability of leaving the county administrative staff in the present court house and construct a new court house."
