Cedar Grove Review

village for their regular monthly meetings.
The CGIT grew and became better established and took the responsibility for the UNICEF boxes at Halloween and gave Marget Serfiek a lovely shower.
The Mother's Club is such a versatile organization, it is hard to keep track of their activities. They read a play, held a Saint Patrick's party, studied the making of drapes, heard Jean Miller tell of her trip to Europe, studied Creative Handwork for children and installed their traditional Mitten Tree in Zion Church for Christmas mittens. Mention should be made of one special gesture the Mother's Club made this year, although they would probably prefer silence on the matter. The members of this group chose to forego the usual exchange of Christmas presents among the members to provide presents for the mentally ill. It was a sweet and generous gesture and should not go unnoticed.
Our churches have had an active year, too. Cedar Grove Mennonite church held Saint John's Ambulance courses for the second year and added a Home Nursing course for the ladies of the community. In July the summer Bible school went on as usual and an evening class covering a survey of the Old Testament was held for the young people. Mr. Al-sasser left Cedar Grove in August to take a church near Bancroft and we learned that Lorne Burkholder was with the Dept. of Indian Affairs in the very far north teaching 35 Indian children. The year closed in the Mennonite church with a special Christmas service held in the church on Christmas night.

School in September. 1960 was a Royal year to remember, with a princess married and a prince born. It was the year Clark Gable died and the year the Archbishop of Canterbury visited the Pope. It was a year when the focus of the world was in Africa. Grandma Moses reached the century mark and Ginny Dare and Neil Hamilton won honours at the Pony Club Horse Show. George McCowan came out on the lucky end of an accident; Markham voted 'No' to Sunday sports; Bruce's Mill was finally acquired by the Conservation Authority; Yvonne Housser and a family of robins fought a battle for building rights under her bedroom window; and Lorne Reesor brought his family home for Christmas.

That was the year inside and outside Cedar Grove. Now we move into 1961. An upside-down year that reads the same no matter whether you stand on your head or your heels. 1961 is the first year since 1881 amendable to this stunt and the next one comes in 6009, 4048 years hence.

The leaving of the old year, and the beginning of the new seems to bring the poet out in the best and the worst of us. In closing our year in Cedar Grove, let's leave it to one of the best:
The woods are lovely, dark and deep,
But I have promises to keep,
And miles to go before I sleep,
And miles to go before I sleep.
—Robert Frost

May the new year bring to Cedar Grove happiness and health, good crops and rewards for the labour involved therein. May it relieve us of the fear of war and bring to our hearts and the hearts of all men everywhere the true awareness of sharing a bountiful earth with one another.
