Timber Wolves Attack Reach Township Farmer

THE STOUFFVILLE TRIBUNE Thursday, October 11, 1962 Page 9

Thomas Carter, a Reach Twp. | "passing through." farmer living east of the Town of Uxbridge, said that he was recently attacked by wolves rables. while harrowing a back field near a wooded swamp area.

What he thought first was a deer in the dust made by his machine, turned out to be a large gray timber wolf, he said.

The wolf crouched and sprang at the tractor as he drew closer. The hind feet of the animal touched the ground, while the forepaws rested on the hood, the open mouth showing strong, sharp fangs.

Mr Carter said he steered the tractor into the bush and against a tree, which brushed the animal off, and it retreated into the wood.s The tractor stalled, and the uneasy farmer was obliged to climb from it to unhitch the harrows to release it from the not well. tree. After a careful scrutiny of the bush, he resumed his harrowing. Several more rounds brought him to the edge of the swamp again, and three different wolves emerged, heading towards the tractor.

This time the farmer made a hasty retreat over the ploughed were dinner guests of Mr and field to the lane where Dr. Carl Puterbough, a neighbour and an Uxbridge dentist( was driving in on his tractor to pay him a

Mr Carter raced to the house for his gun and the two men with Carter's son, Hugh, drove in a car to the tractor, where the wolves were still circling. When they were caught in the bright ring of the car lights, they disappeared into the swamp.

COULD BE RABID

Two of the wolves, Mr Carter said, were large timber wolves, and the third was a redhued bush wolf. He stated that he believed the animals to be rabid, since their attack, and their method of attack, was not the customary action of wolves. The next day about 15 hunters and their dogs scourged the swamp, and they could find no sign of the animals. Mr Carter have to buy them for a flock of believes the pack was just youngsters.

Cattle on a neighboring farm are presently quarantined for

The Carters say that this is not the first time wild animals have been heard or seen on the property. At night, the scream of the wildcat, is often heard, and tracks through the bush, they said, could be those of a moose.
