Bloomington History Old-time Social Activities

School Picnic Of course in summer the farming community was too busy to take much time off for pleasure, therefore when they did, it was all the more enjoyable. In days gone by the Annual Musselman's Lake School Picnic held the last Saturday in June, was an event that few people missed. > During the sumer also the churches held strawberry honey festivals, garden parties, ice cream socials, etc. In the fall there were annual hot fowl suppers (25c a supper) in the old hall on the lot where Tom White now lives. The large upstairs hall served as a community centre for many activities in the 80's and 90's. Later the fowl suppers were held in the Christian church basement. In the fall also were held husking and paring bees. The latter were held in the evenings when the young people gathered at farm house to prepare apples for apple butter, to be boiled next day in large kettles outdoors. When three to six or more bushels of apples had been peeled then the fun began: games were played, spelling or geography matches or debates were held, followed by lunch. Then couples paired off for the homeward walk or ride.

But our description of the sosugaring off parties in the woods. Those farmers like W.A. maple syrup and sugar were very generous in the welcome days of spring. When their supply of these goodies had been acquired and the run of sap continued they would invite the neighbourhood young people to a taffy party in their woods. The bright fire giving off that tangy aroma of burning wood, caused the sweet sap to bubble and finally to produce the fragrant taffy or sugar; games of hide and seek, blind man's buff, etc., were played around the fire, with many a tumble and shriek of laughter. It did not matter how much wood was burned in the bonfire, for were there not many tree limbs standing in huge piles ready to use for this very purpose? As the moon looked down upon the scene, what matter if he did see away from the bright fire for a stroll in the balmy spring air.

Box Socials One must not forget the box socials. These were held in the homes or in the school house. Each young lady would find a it beautifully with Valentine, S. Patrick or other suitable symbols then fill it with delectable goodies of all sorts, putting her name inside. Now the part played by the young men at these socials was to come prepared to buy these boxes, an auctioneer to auction each box to the highest bidder after an evening of games. Everyone breathlessly awaited the begin-ning of the auction. With much curiosity the boys tried to ascertain, which box belonged to the girl of his choice and who would say that the girl sometimes did not give him a bit of help. But it was all so much fun that everyone thoroughly enjoyed the evening; the money raised was used for some. good purpose.

These are only some of the to be reminded of our glorious highlights of social life in for- God and of the solid basis we mer days. Doubtless your parents will tell you of many more of which we have not space to write. Certainly we cannot say that social life was dull or nonexistent in those days. Instead for it was wholesome, exhilarating ed. and unbiased, well deserving

Cedar Posts Getting Scarce

Cedar posts are becoming a hard item to obtain. Farmers are finding that it is not worth the trouble to cut, draw, peel and deliver posts at the going rate. This information came to light at last week's Victoria County road committee meeting. About the only source of posts which at one time were obtained chiefly from farmers, is now the re-

York County forest at Vivian produces thousands of posts but few are used by the road department. Victoria County councillors moved to use more steel posts in future since the cedar seemed to be going out of style in so far as production is concerned. The steel is easier to install, lasts longer and in the long run would be cheaper.

Golden Text: O give thanks unto the Lord: for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. -Psalm 136:1

Psalm 105 is an unsullied is "Great is Thy faithfulness O God our Father." The writer lets the light of that wonderful truth shine brightly on God's varied dealings with His own people, with the nations and events involved in their history. C.H. Spurgeon states that this Psalm was evidently written by cial life would not be complete King David, that the first fifteen verses were sung at the carrying up of the ark from Fockler, Watson Fairles and the house of Obed-edom (1 suit such an occasion admirably and, indeed, any season that God's people were celebrating with thanksgiving His watchful care over them. "The last Psalm (104)" Spurgeon adds, "sang the opening chapters of Genesis, and this takes up its closing chapters and conducts us into Exodus and Numbers."

Has Psalm 105 a message pertinent for us today? Yes, indeed, as has all Scripture. God is unchanging. His faithfulness to His people. His dealings with them in the past are both reliable guides for us today. Jesus included the Psalms in the Scriptures that spoke of Him. His salvation, and His commission to His people (Luke 24:... a couple here and there stray 48), so we may listen for His voice to us and expect to find His footprints as we search the Scriptures. We shall not be disappointed in these expectations, for the same Lord who delivered His people from Egypt and pretty box or basket, decorate led them, despite their waywardness, through the wilderness to make of them a people for Himself (Deut. 14:2), is still gathering His Church out of Egypt of this world. He is leading them through their wanderings and establishing them as and to enjoy the contents with His peculiar people (a "people the lady whose name he found for His own possession"-and inside. Of course, there must be not as might be supposed at first sight "odd" people). His purpose is "that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light: which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy" (1 Pet. 2:9, 10) If we are numbered among these people of God, we shall sing along with the psalmist this song of thanksgiving, glad have for confidence in Him. If we are not among that number we should pray that our eyes may be opened to see and long for the blessings of the redeem-
