There was a slight mistake in last week's local news concerning the Whitehead farm which is named the Double U. Mr. Donald Whitehead while considering a name for his farm, noticed a horse shoe in his barn. Two of these horse shoes, placed slightly overlapping, formed the English letter W—the initial letter of Whitehead. Thus the farm was named the Double U. The name Shivering Heights was chosen for the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Freeman—daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Whitehead—as they watched the progress of their building on the windy hill-top of the Whitehead Farm during the winter. Inspiration came also from the Emily Bronte novel Wuthering Heights.
